South Vietnamese Recapture Quang Tri Province Today

SAIGON (AP) — South Vietnamese marines opened a counteroffensive in Quang Tri Province today and, flying their nation's flag as they landed, recaptured the first piece of territory from the North Vietnamese in the northern front.

The attack began with a lightning airborne assault that drew U.S. Marines back into the war for the first time in more than a year. The Americans flew the South Vietnamese in on helicopters.

South Vietnamese flags could be seen from the My Chanh River flying in the breeze as the South Vietnamese marines reoccupied Hai Lang district town to the south of the city of Quang Tri, which fell to the North Vietnamese May 1. It was the first counteroffensive on the northern front.

South Vietnamese forces liberated a number of civilians who had been hiding in the area for several days, the Saigon command said. They were taken to My Chanh, five miles to the south.

Field reports indicated the South Vietnamese marines ran into strong resistance at some points in the drive north, but heavy U.S. air strikes sent some of the North Vietnamese troops fleeing in apparent disarray and many of them were caught in the open by bombs.

The action is not expected to have a real effect on anticipated North Vietnamese plans to attack Hue, 25 miles south of Hai Lang. It is not in an area where the expected attack on Hue is expected to come from.

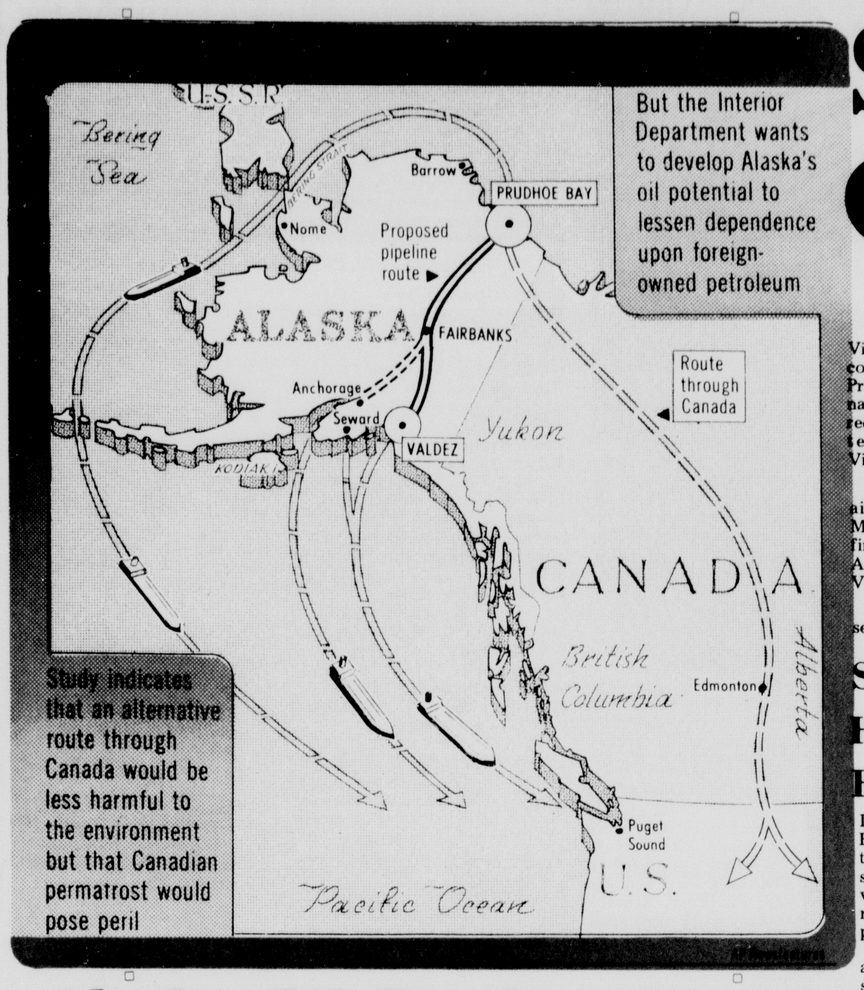
In the southern region, heavy fighting raged for the third straight day at An Loc, the long-besieged provincial capital 60 miles north of Saigon. North Vietnamese troops made repeated bloody attacks on the city, which President Nguyen Van Thieu has ordered held at all costs.

The U.S. Marine helicopter crews in Quang Tri Province— the northernmost area in South Vietnam—were the first Marine air units recommitted to the vietnam war since April 1971, when Marine air forces were withdrawn under President Nixon's pullout program.

Associated Pre ss corresponden Peter Arett reported from the northern front that the U.S. Marine helicopter crews were from the carrier Okinawa. They landed 1,000 South Vietnamese marines into Hai Lang district town on the southern edges of Quang Tri City, the provincial capital.

The airlifted South Vietnamese marines, joined by a cloumn of 500 Saigon marines moving on foot, reoccupied the district town in less than three hours, Arnett reported.

Arnett said one big CH46 Seaknight helicopter was destroyed by the Americans themselves after it was disabled on the ground by a mechancial failure. There were no US.. casualties and no U.S. ground combat troops were involved.



Alaska Oil Pipeline Urged

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The U. S. Interior Department says an Alaska oil pipeline poses a greater spill risk than one through Canada, but the latter route would cause more damage because of the greater degree of permafrost.

A lengthy study by the department indicated that a route through Canada would be less damaging to the environment because it could share a common land barrier with a possible natural gas pipe under consideration by several oil and gas companies.

But, said Interior Undersecretary William T. Pecora, a Canadian line would require extensions east and west to the U.S. Midwest and the West Coast.

"Inevitably much actual disruption would result," he declared. A consortium of seven oil companies that would construct the trans- Alaska pipeline are also involved in the trans- Alaska gas pipeline.

The proposed 48- inch oil pipeline would run 789 miles from Prudhoe Bay to the ice-free Alaskan port of Valdez. It would cost an estimated $5 billion.

The pipeline would take about three years to build and would carry some 500,000 barrels of oil each day by 1975, rising to 2 million barrels by 1980, the Interior Department said.

Pecora indicated that the spill risk of an Alaska line would not pose much of a problem.

"It has not been shown that chronic minor spillage of oil does any actual damage," he said.

An environmental impact survey by the department said, however, that spillage caused by oil transfers and tanker ballast-cleaning at Port Valdez could result in "a gradual buildup and accumulation of pollutant hydrocarbons" in the water.

This spilled oil "could ... possibly affect areas far distant from the original discharge site," it said. The impact statement said oil pollution would be costly to both salmon fishermen and the Alaskan herring industry. It added that shellfishing "would be restricted and perhaps lost entirely for unknown lengths of time."

"It is likely that the commercial and recreational harvest of Dungeness crabs in Port Valdez would be lost as a result of normal terminal operations," the report said.

Pecora cautioned that "it is important to distinguish between actual alteration and potential threats to the ecology in constructing a pipeline to bring oil from the North Slope of Alaska."

"As was noted in the impact statement," he said, "...a pipeline across Alaska would cause less known damage than the Canadian route.

"This is true chiefly because the Alaska route would be far shorter than any pipeline through Canada."

Soviet Ships Head Toward Haiphong Port

LONDON (AP) — The British Broadcasting Corp. reported today that Moscow radio says eight Soviet merchant vessels are steaming for the mined North Vietnamese port of Haiphong.

The BBC quoted the radio as saying the heavy tonnage ships were carrying fertilizers, agricultural machinery and food and clothing.

It said the ships were crossing the Indian and Atlantic oceans and were ahead of their schedules. It did not say when they were due to arrive off North Vietnam.

The Japanese Defense Agency had reported Friday that two Soviet warships were spotted moving south into the East China Sea north of Vietnam.

Two Killed In Apartment Fire

CAPE GIRARDEAU — A man and woman were killed when fire of undetermined origin swept through a two-story frame apartment building early this morning at 123 South Pacific.

Dead are Van Crain, 23, of 2013 Brink, a sailor, and Mrs. Kathy Seibert, 27, of Scott City. She is the wife of James Seibert, a Scott City high school coach who was in Columbia for a track meet at the time of the fire. She was a legal secretary.

Crane's body was found on the floor of the family room of the Dan Wiethop apartment where he collapsed while apparently trying to reach the kitchen door. Mrs. Seibert's body was found in a closet in the kitchen. Officials said she had apparently made a left turn into the closet instead of a right turn out the back door while tryingto escape. Both died of suffocation according to Cape Girardeau County Coroner Herbert E. Riehn.

Firemen were called when Wiethop, who owned the building discovered the fire at 4:20 a.m. Assistant Fire Chief Rich May said when firemen reached the building flames were shooting through windows and doors.

Wiethop told firemen, that he, Crain, Mrs. Seibert, and other couples had been to a night club in East Cape,Girardeau, Ill., until

$31 Million Share In U.S. Budget

Scott County's share of the cost of the federal budget is $31.3 million, according to figures released by the Missouri Public Expenditure.

Missouri's share is $5.3 billion, which equals one of every $4 personal income of Missourians.

Total federal revenues are estimated at $220.8 billion in the budget for the fiscal year beginning July 1 and expenditures of $246.3 billion, leaving a deficit of $25.5 billion.

Revised revenue and expenditure estimates for the current fiscal year indicate a deficit for this year of $38.8 billion, the survey said. As recently as last September, that deficit had been estimated at $28 billion. The federal debt is now estimated to be $493.2 billion on June 30, 1973.

Missouri's share of the federal budget is computed at 2.16 per cent of the total budget, the survey said, under a formula developed over a number of years by Tax Foundation, a governmental research organization with headquarters in NewYork.

Other Bootheel counties and their share of the budget include:

Mississippi, $12.7 million.
New Madrid, $15.9 million.
Stoddard, $21.4 million
Pemiscot, $19.8 million.
Dunklin, $28.2 million.

Major Breakthrough In Control of Mosquitoes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government scientists say they have scored what could be a major breakthrough in the control of disease-bearing mosquitoes without the use of DDT or other chemical pesticides.

Agriculture Department scientists, who directed the research, say the use of tiny parasitic worms which bore holes in mosquito larvae "holds particu lar promise" for controlling the insects.

The tiny worms, called nematodes, are being field-tested by the U.S. Public Health Service in El Salvador and by the World Health Organization in Taiwan and Thailand.

A key to the experiment was the development of a low-cost method of mass producing a species of nematodes, Reesimermis nielseni, which attack only mosquitoes.

The procedures are described in the May issue of "Agricultural Research," a magazine published by USDA.

At present, DDT is the cheapest and favorite pesticide for controlling mosquitoes in malaria areas of the world. Malathion, a potent but less persistent chemical, also is used.

Laboratory tests over a twoyear period have shown the worms infect 13 of 19 known kinds of mosquitoes in Louisiana and have a 100 per cent kill record among insects they infect, USDA scientists say.

Although mosquitoes are the natural and only known hosts for the r. nielseni nematode, the worms usually kill only while the mosquitoes are in the "wiggler" or larvae stage of development.

The larvae develop from eggs and, if they survive, turn into adult mosquitoes which then can carry many diseases, including sleeping sickness or encephalitis as well as malaria.

ARS scientists say that mass production of the worms will enable man to spread them over large areas artifically, much the same as chemicals are applied now.

As with all control measures, however, there are drawbacks.

Rail Strike Averted

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's railroads and the Sheet Metal Workers union agreed on a new contract today, a railroad spokesman announced, averting the threat of a strike May 31.

Chairman William H. Dempsey of the National Railway Labor Conference, bargaining agent for the railroads, said the agreement is in line with the industry pattern of a 42-percent increase over 42 months.

Dempsey said he could not disclose specific terms of the new contract until it is ratified by the 6,300 members of the Sheet Metal Workers' International Association.

The contract, retroactive to Jan. 1, 1971, must be approved by the Pay Board before it can be implemented, Dempsey said.

Settlement of the 18-month dispute signals the final agreement with all of the 15 unions the railroads have negotiated with on a national basis, Dempsey said.

He said the only remaining dispute in the industry is between Penn Central Railroad and the United Transportation Union over the size of freight train crews.

He said the Sheet Metal Workers' contract also provides for retention of the so-called incidental work rule, which allows a member of one union to do the work ordinarily done by another union under certain circumstances.

Dempsey said the contract followed recommendations of Presidential Emergency Board 181, which was appointed by President Nixon in March to avert a strike.

The board held hearings on the dispute in Washington during April and made its report to Nixon May 1.

14 Die In Bus-Truck Crash

BEAN STATION, Tenn. (AP) — Fourteen persons were reported killed and 15 injured, four critically, early today when a Greyhound bus and a tractor-trailer collided near this onetime stage coach station. The truck burst into flames.

The dead included the drivers of both vehicles and at least two children, authorities said.

Three of the injured were able to be taken into private homes at nearby Morristown after emergency hospital treatment.

The Greyhound company at Roanoke, Va., which said the bus was due there this morning, identified the driver of the bus as Frank Flick of Roanoke. The driver of the truck was not identified immediately.

Morristown-Hamblen Hospital said most of the injured were from the Norfolk, Va., area. The bus was headed in that direction, from Knoxville, about 40-45 miles southwest of the wreck site.

The four persons most seriously injured were taken to hospitals in Knoxville and Kingsport.

The wreck occurred about 5 a.m., about 100 yards in front of the home of Jesse Coffee, 27.

"It sounded like a case of dynamite went off," said Coffee. "It jarred the whole house. Then everything was quiet and all we heard was a baby crying."

He said he and his wife rushed outside and found the baby, lying in a ditch between two adults who were dead. Before ambulances arrived, he said, he personally removed three men, two women and two children from the bus. One of the children was dead, he said.

Morristown-Hamblen Hospital spokesmen said 14 bodies were in the hospital conference room, where officials were seeking to identify them. Two of the bodies were of children.

"We treated three of the injured and released them, and they went to private homes here in Morristown," a nurse in the emergency room said.

"One was a woman, the other was a baby and I think the third also was a woman. But we've been so busy I can't say for sure."

It could not be determined immediately if the baby released by the hospital was the same one found by the Coffees, but Coffee said that infant appeared to be all right. Other neighbors said several other survivors scrambled to safety from the wrecked bus.

The truck, which the Tennessee Highway Patrol said bore Alabama license plates, was loaded with a cargo of vinyl floor covering and drums of tar-like glue for applying it. The cargo burst into flames almost immediately, the Tennessee Highway Patrol said.

In Washington, the National Transportation Safety Board said it was sending experts to the scene to take charge of the investigation. There was no obvious explanation for the wreck, which apparently occurred on dry pavement before showers moved into the area.

WE KNOW WHO THE PIGS ARE

One does not have to go outside of the New York City to see what the civilization and culture of the nation would be if the hippies, radicals, Communists, far-out liberals and like-minded persons took over the country. We have in New York a large laboratory demonstration of the future as they envision it.

The latest indication can be viewed on the Columbia University campus, where students and outsiders raised in the permissive way of life have vandalized the facade of a beautiful new building opened in 1971, the School of International Affairs. Large statements crudely painted in red (the lettering leans drunkenly) attack Professor Andrew Cordier, dean of the school, and praise MAO as a hero.

Other indications of things to come if the nation should go irrevocably to the people who call policemen "pigs" are also present on the campus. Only a few years ago it was a pretty area in a deteriorting district. There were many grass-covered quadrangles bordered by hedges or flowers. Now most of the quadrangles have been trampled into mud or dust, and those which are green are under attack.

The defacement of other areas of the city goes on apace. The subways are being steadily polluted and silted up by the graffiti of the illiterate and nearly illiterate. If this is the handwriting on the wall, we are in serious trouble.

SHADES OF THE CORN BLIGHT

The corn blight that dismayed farmers in 1970 came back to haunt consumers this year. The spurt in the consumer cost of beef from November to February was popularly blamed on greedy ranchers and gouging supermarket owners. But the single most important factor was probably the poor corn crop in 1970. The shortage brought rising corn prices and resulted in the higher cost of feeding cattle in 1971.

The blight loomed large last spring when farmers were working out their planting plans. Rather than risk another poor year, the Agriculture Department authorized a larger than normal acreage for corn. The result was a record crop of 5.5 billion bushels and corn was piled up in the streets of some Iowa towns because there was no room for it in the local elevators. Given the choice, some farmers might have preferred a touch of the blight.

The Agriculture Department sees no danger of blight this year. Thus its efforts are geared to holding down corn production as much as possible. Basically, it has offered 80 cents a bushel for corn the farmers opt not to grow. Still, the crop is expected to be 5.1 billion bushels, as against anticipated needs of 4.8 to 4.9 billion. A spokesman for the Department told Editorial Research Reports that a shade over 58 million acres is expected to be planted to corn this year -- only 7-1/2 per cent less than last year.

There are several imponderables in any estimate. A cold, wet spring has delayed corn planting across the Midwest. And if the late-starting crop bumps up against an early onslaught of winter, the yield might be less than demand. Whatever happens, consumers are not immune. They will feel the effects sometime later as the corn is converted into beef, eggs, and milk.

PERFECTLY

Would you vote for a presidential candidate who made the following speech?

"The stock market will plunge and inflation and unemployment will be about 6 per cent. I will initiate wage and price controls and they will fail. I will have a secret plan for ending the war that will be secret improvisations.

"I will dispense with a foreign advisor accountable to the Congress and appoint instead a member of my staff. That will bring about equality: The Congress will know as little about our foreign commitments as do you, the people.

"I will devalue the dollar.

"I will set a new record -- a $47 billion deficit budget. In fact, during my first term I will be responsible for 25 per cent of the Nation's national debt.

"I will be known by the companies I keep -- Lockheed and ITT."

Congressman James Symington suggested something like the above would have been a straightforward speech by Presidential Candidate Nixon in 1968 -- or a report to the Nation of his four-year stewardship.

The Congressman concluded:

"Democrats who think President Nixon is unbeatable need therapy."

I'D BE CYNICAL
OF ME

George C. Wallace is a demogogue. His grasp of economics is rudimentary. But he has a knack for putting his finger on the issues that have left a large part of the U. S. electorate bitter, disillusioned, and resentful.

Last week, he said to a reporter (page 60): "I'll tell you what people don't like. The average man is cynical of all politicans and officeholders now. I just happen to be one of the anti - establishment kind, and if I was up in the establishment, I'd be cynical of me."

In so saying, he summed up what many be the most important issue of all in the 1972 elections. The public has been deceived, hoodwinked, and manipulated at every level of government from White House to county court house. It believes neither the statements of its elected officials nor the promises of office-seekers. It has lost in large measure the basic faith that makes the democratic process work.

George Wallace would have good reason to be cynical about himself should he bulldoze his way into the establishment. But the candidates who are running against him should ponder what he has said. The public desperately wants someone who will tell it the truth and restore its faith.

At this point, the field is wide open. — Business Week.

For several months, reports on the economic situation in the nation have varied from very bleak to bright. Some of the reports have been nothing more than guesswork. Some have been designed to serve political purposes.

In the face of conflicting reports, is there any way for the retail merchant to get a true picture of his potential sales for 1970?

Yes. A few reports are based on facts. Perhaps the most reliable are the figures of the Federal Reserve Board. This disinterested agency indicates that 1970 is going to be an exceptionally good year for the retailer. the volumne of spring shopping, according to the Federal Reserve Board, is running well above last year's volume. During the first week in July department stores did more business than they did in 1969.

Dun and Bradstreet, reliable source of information on market conditions, supports the optimism reflected in the Federal Reserve Board estimates. The firm reports retail trade "smartly" above a year ago.

Another sign worth noting: The nation's largest retail store has announced that it will spend more on newspaper advertising in 1970 than it has during any previous year.

Of course some retail stores have lost business because of localized unemployment. In general, however, the retail merchant should be doing better than he did in 1969.

Apparently some retailers are assumbing that things are going to get worse before they get better. This attitude can certainly make the assumption true. It leads to a reduction in advertising and promotion which drives business to other stores. There is good evidence that the consumer has money to spend, and that he is spending it where he is being sold by strong local advertising.

FOR IVAN, RUBLES
NO OBJECT

The United States spends less than one-half of 1 per cent of its Gross National Product on space activities. According to the best estimates, the Soviet Union spends about 2 per cent of a GNP half as large.

This means that dollar for dollar or ruble for ruble, the Soviet Union spends twice as much on space as does the United States.

Despite this fact, there is little evidence of grumbling among Russians that these billions might better be devoted to pressing domestic problems. Lest you jump to the conclusion that this is because Soviet citizens have little say in the running of their country, be advised that the reason is quite otherwise.

Asked to explain it, Dr. Boris N. Petrov, director of the Soviet Academy's Intercosmos Branch, the Soviet NASA, offered: "Probably that is connected with the fact that many social problems in the Soviet Union are already solved or are being successfully solved."

Having achieved paradise on earth, or almost, can the Russians be blamed for reaching to the heavens?

FALSE SECURITY

Everyone dreams of escaping the turmoil of life. Some go to considerable length to achieve this dream, only to find that in the end there is no alternative but to sink or swim with the rest of their fellowmen. Smart people endeavor to hedge against inflation in countless ways from buying diamonds and land to speculating in the stock market. Others try to dodge rising crime and violence by buying homes in protected areas. One of these, a thousand-acre tract near Houston, Texas, is an electronically fortified city surrounded by a wall six-feet high, protected by guards and individual security systems in each home.

Eventually, it is expected that as many as 200,000 people will live in this single compound. As one observer notes, the citizen who seeks security in this manner is probably doomed to disappointment, and "... by retreating into a walled city, he is cutting off his only real chance for survival." Survival depends upon all of us supporting law enforcement agencies, the rights of persons and property -- and elected public officials who shun the temptation of paving the road to public office with taxpayers' dollars.

"What do you want now, daughter? Haven't I just set your husband up in business?"

"Yes, sure, Dad — but now he wants you to buy him out."

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — President Nixon is again releasing selective information from his secret advices in an attempt to manage the Vietnam news.

He has taken excerpts out of context which give a misleading impression of Vietnam developments.

The White House has spread the word, for example, that the mining of Haiphong harbor will affect the fighting in Vietnam within two or three weeks. Sources with access to the secret estimates flatly dispute this. Although the predictions vary, most estimates warn that Gen. Vo Nguyen Giap, the fabulous North Vietnamese commander, has enough men and material at the fighting fronts to last three or four months.

The secret reports express grudging admiration for Giap's genius at moving supplies under hazardous, almost impossible conditions. The American high command still can't figure out how he moved Soviet tanks, heavy artillery and antiaircraft missiles into South Vietnam without American planes spotting and destroying them.

In any case, the intelligence reports claim only about one-third of the Soviet equipment reaches North Vietnam by ship. Our most massive bombing has also failed to halt the flow of enemy armaments over the land supply routs.. The secret consensuns, therefore, is that the President's drastic actions in the North will have only a minimal effect on the fighting in the South.

Earlier, the President quoted Gen Creighton Abrams, the American commander in Saigon, as saying the South Vietnamese army was fighting courageously and well. Sources with access to Abrams's secret reports tell us this message was taken out of context. Actually, Abrams had raised grave questions about the South Vietnamese military leadership, battle tactics and dependence on air support.

The Abrams message, which the President quoted, intended to convey in its full context only that the South Vietnamese were fighting better than the General had expected.

The President's foreign policy czar, Henry Kissinger, has also told the press that Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev led him to believe in Moscow that a Vietnamese settlement would come from renewed negotiations.

Sources with access to the full text of the Kissinger-Brezhnev talks agree that the Soviet leader encouraged the United States to renew negotiations. But Brezhnev was emphatic in declaring that the Soviet Union would not intervene to arrange a settlement and would not decrease its arm shipments to North Vietnam. Brezhnev suggested only that the Vietnamese war need not jeopardize Russian-American relations.

Clearly, the President, in taking the American people into his confidence about the Vietnamese war, is playing the old game of pick -and- choose.

SEC Connivance

The Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC), which is supposed to guard the public against corporate conniving, has joined the connivers in a multimillion-dollar case.

The commission has shown a strange concern for the welfare of American Electric Power, the nation's largest electric holding company, which is dead determined to take over an Ohio electric company worth $500 million.

To help grease the political skids, American Electric has mobilized senators, congressmen, mayors and other influential figures. Indeed, the SEC staff has accused American Electric's lawyer lobbyist, Arvin Alexander, of soliciting letters "designed to improperly influence" the SEC proceedings.

But the commissioners seem more impressed with a corporate giant and its political allies than with their own staff. For example, the commissioners, headed by Chairman William Casey, have sided with American Electric in its efforts to bypass the staff hearing examiner, Irving Schiller.

Although Schiller has worked four years on the case, the commissioners notified him in a blunt, one -page memo that they want to take the case away from him and decide it themselves. The bold Schiller, however, is resisting.

An SEC staff team, headed by Gruff, grizzled Sol Freedman, has also fought in behalf of the consumers against the American Electric takeover. The staff accused the company of "unwholesome and retaliatory actions...aimed at a witness."

But the commissioners killed subpoenaes designed to get the truth of these charges.

From our own sources and 30,000 pages of official evidence, we have discovered a variety of pressure tactics used by American Electric. Consider these examples;

- We found a 1969 letter from Mayor M.E. Sensenbrenner of Columbus, Ohio, suggesting that then-Senator Stephen Young, D-O., approach "the staff or members of the SEC" to help swing the deal for American Electric.

- Sen. Robert Taft, R-O., asked acting Attorney General Richard Kleindienst to intervene in behalf of American Electric. This awkward request was made while Kleindienst was under Senate fire for intervening in the ITT case. The embattled Kleindienst refused to help the corporate utility.

- American Electric fired Prof. James Nelson, who had been retained by the company as a lecturer, after he testified against the takeover. Ironically Nelson was going to teach the corporate executives about public utilities regulations.

Meanwhile, American Electric has come up with a dubious settlement offer. Even if it is accepted, the settlement could require further lengthy hearings at the SEC. Footnote: It is worth mentioning that Don Cook, American Electric's president and chairman, once served as chairman of the SEC which now seems so eager to help his company.

Cook was out of the country and couldn't be reached. His executive vice president, Herbert Cohn, denied that there had been any improper pressures in the SEC proceedings. He declared: "If you talk with anyone in the area (served by the Ohio company) -- press, chamber of commerce, political officials -- you'll find that they are very interested in bringing American Electric Power in. They think it would be in the best interests of the area.

Dinner With Comrades: Waterfront Unions Say USSR Doublecrossed Them And Nixon; Threaten to Paralyze Trade With Soviets.

WASHINGTON — There has been a series of high-level telephone conversations so sensitive that to report them would harm this nation. That's not my thing. But what can be disclosed is that early Wednesday morning (May 10) a Cabinet official hit the phones with a series of invitations to waterfront labor leaders to come for cocktails and dinner at the Blair House at 7:30 p.m., May 15--

These calls went out some 36 hours after President Nixon's mine -the- harbors speech. They were made by Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Maritime Affairs Andrew Gibson. He spoke for his chief, the official Blair House host, Secretary of Commerce Peter Peterson -- who on Monday night was entertaining Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin at dinner. They took time out to listen to Mr. Nixon's TV speech and went back to talking business -- lots of business, trade business.

For the moment the subject is mostly grain business. The "Socialist camp," according to official records, has "no other source to go to except us for feed grains." And they need them. And the U.S. has been shipping the Soviets at least $136 million worth of corn, oats and barley all through these months -- and even these very hours of tension.

Most of $100 million worth of corn and oats has already gone over from such ports as Baton Rouge, New Orleans, Galveston and Houston. About $30 million worth of barley is being shipped via the Great Lakes from Duluth.

These grains have been dispatched to feed the Soviet citizenry (and their vita livestock) while Moscow has reciprocated by secretly dispatching artillery and tank to North Vietnam such a American intelligence has never seen. Take the President's word on that. The nature of the Red weapons, not their quantity, came as a surprise to the President.

During the past weeks, at least one Russion trade delegation. and in the past few days, two of them, have been in the U.S. bargaining for further trade. This could run into billions of dollars over the next few years. Perhaps not. It depends on the Soviet priorities -- and, you can believe it, the willingness of the American waterfront unions to work the future shipments.

Our maritime labor chiefs say they've been double-crossed by the Soviets -- and so do some of the top U.S. government officials of a small "inner circle."

First it should be recalled that Teddy Gleason's International Longshoremen's Assn. (ILA) (AFL-CIO) for over 20 years has refused to handle Soviet ships. Last October the question of loading the $136 million worth of grain was laid on Teddy's desk. There was a long conference of waterfront leaders at Cherry Hill, N.J. They had been pressured by several Cabinet members to work the grain. They agreed -- on one condition. And that was thet in the future, American freighters and tankers manned by American seamen, would carry half the cargo in any Russian trade deal. Moscow agreed. They needed the grain.

This time the corn, oats and barley would go over in third-nation ships. No Russian craft. Gleason agreed. But it was for a one-shot deal. At 6 p.m. Nov. 5, 1971, President Nixon telephoned to thank him, to say he didn't differ from Gleason in his opinion of the Communists but the U.S. just had to get into this international trade "for the good of the U.S. itself."

Then new Moscow-Washington trade talks began. At first the Soviets dispatched a high Maritime Ministry delegation. And in the past week there came the highly placed friend of Soviet Communist Party General Secretary Leonid Brezhnev, N.S. Patolechev.

They want to buy. But they don't want to ship the stuff "50-50" or in any other proportion in American ships. To expensive. They prefer the low rates of low-wage nations' merchant marine fleets -- and some of them pay their seamen $40 to $50 a month. That's slave wages.

There's the Socialist Fatherland for you. So the American waterfront labor leaders decided to stand by their "bilateralism" agreement which permitted the original $136 million grain deal to flow. They want the "50-50" agreement to stand. Literally hundreds of millions of dollars in cargo carrying charges are involved -- which means tens of thousands of seagoing jobs. If the Soviets have their way, the American seafarer will starve "on the beach."

The Longshoremen, on whom all trade shopments depend, are standing solid with the seagoing unions. No "50-50"-- no trade. Which means that President Nixon could not guarantee any trade compacts. So Andy Gibson hit the phones Wednesday morning to invite Gleason, as well as Seafarers' leader Paul Hall, Maritime Union chief Joe Curran, and Marine Engineers President Jesse Calhoon, to come and dine and maybe to "bargain" a bit with Patolechev.

And it's far more than a footnote to report that Gleason accepted though there's supposed to be a national dock strike in the air -- so it doesn't appear, does it, that Teddy is gung ho for strangling the nation's ports?

Paris Talks Four Years Old Today

PARIS, (AP) — Four years ago today a distinguished American diplomat and a dignified North Vietnamese representative shook hands to launch the Vietnam peace conference.

W. Averell Harriman, an ambassador-at-large, and Xuan Thuy, once foreign minister of North Vietnam, greeted each other in the hopeful glow of chandeliers at the sprawling International Conference Center. Crowds of newsmen and other onlookers along sunny Avenue Kleber speculated on how soon a peace treaty would be signed on the big felt-covered conference table.

Today a couple of lonely policemen watch over the deserted conference building. Metal barriers with no crowds to hold back snake along its front. Peace negotiators are blocks away contemplating if or when the talks—suspended by the United States nine days ago—will resume.

The conference broke down amid charges and countercharges which rang through the meeting room in almost the same way as they had four years ago.

Harriman then accused North Vietnam of moving "substantial and increasing numbers of troops and supplies" into the South.

It was ridiculous, Thuy reported, to say "that the northern part of Vietnam carries out aggression against the southern part."

At the last session of the conference nearly four years later U.S. Ambassador William J. Porter put it this way to Thuy: "You continue your massive invasion in the most flagrant violation of the 1954 Geneva Accords..."

Thuy came back: "The U.S. talk about North Vietnam invading South Vietnam... is a sheer fabrication."

The peace talks began May 13, 1968, and dragged on through October.

The peace conference took on two more participants in January 1969—the Viet Cong and South Vietnam, but only after Saigon had stalled for weeks over the shape of the conference table.

From then until now the peace conference has sputtered through 149 sessions, and on only one thing do the participants agree: there has been no progress.

But the Avenue Kleber meetings were only the tip of the iceberg. Underneath, during much of the period of public fencing, there have been secret talks.

One series was conducted between Henry Cabot Lodge, Harriman's successor, and the North Vietnamese. Lodge's successor, David Bruce, had one secret session. Dr. Henry Kissinger, President Nixon's national security adviser, has held 13 sessions with the North Vietnamese.

The latest meeting broke up May 2 amid the same charges and countercharges.

Communist Ships Keeping Distance

WASHINGTON (AP) — Adm. Thomas H. Moorer, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff indicated today Communist freighters are still staying several hundred miles away from Haiphong Harbor, sealed off by U.S. minefields.

Moorer said in an interview that the closest freighter was in the South China Sea about on a line with the demilitarized zone separating North and South Vietnam.

This would suggest that the Russians and other countries with ships inbound to North Vietnam have no immediate intention to challenge the U.S. mine barrier, placed in the entrances of Haiphong, North Vietnam's chief port, and six other smaller ports.

Moorer said there had been no significant ship movements overnight since a Pentagon spokesman reported Friday that several merchant ships heading for North Vietnamese ports apparently had changed course.

An estimated 25 Russian and other vessels have been reported en route to North Vietnam, but officials have refused to pinpoint their locations. These ships were at sea, reportedly strung out over many hundreds of miles, when President Nixon ordered the U.S. mining operation designed to prevent war supplies from reaching North Vietnam at a time when Hanoi's troops are mounting a serious offensive against South Vietnam.

Asked whether the Communists may have decided to outflank the mine barrier and land cargo in southern Chinese ports, Moorer said, "that's an alternative."

The nation's top military officer said the Chinese would have to agree to this and to supply railroad rolling stock to carry the diverted cargoes into North Vietnam by train.

Draft Maximum After June To Be 35,000

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird announced Saturday that a maximum of 35,000 young men will be drafted in the last six months of this year.

He told a group of civic leaders this will bring the year's total inductions into the armed services to not more than 50,000.

This will be roughly half the 98,000 men tapped by the draft in 1971.

The quota for the last half of 1972 represents a steep increase over the 15,000 young men to be called in the first six months through June.

The small draft quota for the first half of 1972 was levied because the Defense Department was drastically reducing total U.S. arms strength during this period, at least partly under congressional mandate.

As of the last official report, there were 2,385,194 men in uniform on March 31. This means that the total in the armed services is about 6,000 men below what President Nixon had projected for the end of June, beating the budget manpower deadline by three months.

Hats Off to our Grads

EPA Refuses To Delay Auto Emission Rules

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency has refused to delay enforcement of the governmentordered regulations on auto emission standards for 1975 model year cars. But auto makers have indicated the fight is far from over.

EPA Administrator William D. Ruckelshaus Friday turned down requests by the auto industry for a one-year extension of the requirements of the 1970 Clean Air Amendments.

The amendments require a 90 per cent reduction of carbon monoxide and hydrocarbon emissions for 1975 model year cars, compared with the 1970 emission levels. However, Ruckelshaus is permitted to grant a one-year suspension if the auto industry is unable to develop the necessary technology for compliance.

Ruckelshaus said he was unconvinced the five auto companies could not meet the standards, despite their testimony in 2,000 pages of application and 13 days of public hearings.

The EPA decision was immediately criticized as impactical by the auto industry.

Gerald C. Meyers, an American Motors vice president, said, "We stand on what we told the EPA about our position that the technology does not exist. There is not time to develop it for 1975 model production ...."

Ford, General Motors and Chrysler agreed. GM said, "Not even a single experimental car of any manufacturer has been able to pass the 1975 certification tests in accordance with EPA procedure."

Several environmentalists expressed concern over concessions that Ruckelshaus said would be allowed.

Instead of requiring that each automobile off the assembly line meet the individual standards, he said the law would permit averaging of test results to meet the standards.

Ruckelshaus said he also would permit one change of the chemical catalysts used by the antipollution device chosen by auto makers as their first line of defense against pollution.

Barbara Reid, a spokesman for four environmental groups, said permitting a catalyst change instead of requiring a single chemical charge to last the full 50,000 miles of warranty would put the burden of maintenance on the car owners.

Rep. Paul G. Rogers, D-Fla., House author of the 1970 law, said the Ruckelshaus decision "fully backed the intent of Congress. This may well be the crucial decision that shows we do intend to clean up our environment."

Suit Demands End To Vietnam War

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Ecologist Barry Commoner and Teamsters Union official Harold Gibbons have filed suit against the federal government demanding an end to the war in Vietnam.

The suit filed in U.S. District Court Friday contends President Richard M. Nixon has refused to stop the war as ordered by Congress.

It asks for an injunction to stop Nixon from refusing to set a definate date for U.S. withdrawal. The suit also asks to stop the refusal to negotiate in good faith with the North Vietnamese.

Commoner and Gibbons were joined in the suit by physics professor Dan Bolef of Washington University, Army Sgt. Sanford J. Berger of Ft. Leonard Wood, Mo. and the Vietnam Veterans Against the War.

The federal government has 60 days to reply to the court action.

Guidelines On How To Break Up A Marriage

Dear Ann Landers: Recently you printed eight suggestions on how to break up the marriage of a son or daughter. I would like to add two more. These are guaranteed to work. I know because they destroyed my marriage. Here they are:

(1) Whenever your married son and daughter visit with their children, make a point of how thin and tired the kids look. Get across the message that you don't have a very high opinion of the way your beloved grandchildren are being cared for. Intimate that the mother's neglect is detrimental to the health of the youngsters. Ask repeatedly what they eat and why it is that they have so many colds. If the kid breaks a tooth or is injured during play, get all the details and place the blame on lack of supervision.

(2) If your son has a button off his shirt or if his shirt isn't ironed as well as you used to do it when he lived at home, say something. Also mention the hole in his sock or the spot on his coat. It will fan the flame of self-pity and it could start the final fight that ends in the divorce court.

I hope you will reprint the original eight rules along with the two additional suggestions as a refresher course for in-laws. The divorce lawyers from coast to coast are sure to profit from a re-run. Thank you. — It Happened In New Mexico.

Dear N. Mex.: Thank you for two splendid additions to the original eight ways to break up a marriage. For those who didn't see the first eight, here they are:

(1) When a son or daughter lets you know they plan to be married, show open hostility to the person of his choice. After all, marriage means less love and attention for parents and they have a right to resent it.

(2) Expect your married children to spend every Sunday and holiday at your home. Act hurt if they have other plans.

(3) If your married children have problems with their mates, encourage them to come home, no matter what. Listen attentively to all complaints and point out additional faults which may have gone unobserved. Remember, a drop of water at a time can wear away a rock -- if you keep at it long enough.

(4) If your married children are having financial problems, rush in with the checkbook. If you are having financial problems, yourself, borrow, if necessary, but let them know they'll never have to do without anything so long as you are around.

(5) If a married child has a drinking problem, keep telling him his mate drove him to it. It will make him feel better. Everyone needs someone to blame.

(6) If your married child gets an opportunity for advancement which takes him to another city, tell him family is more important than money and if he leaves, God will punish him for not obeying the commandment, "Honor they father and thy mother."

(7) If there are grandchildren, smother them with gifts. If the parents object, tell them to keep out of it. After all, grandchildren are to spoil. Sneak money to the kids secretly if you have to. They'll love you for it.

(8) If your married child has a difference of opinion with his mate, get into the act and give them both a sample of your wisdom born of years of experience. What do THEY know? You've lived! If you talk loud enough, maybe you can turn a minor argument into a major hassle and break up the marriage.

Confidential to Friendly Al: Stop being so "friendly" or you'll wind up paying her bills again, Dummy.

Don't flunk your chemistry test. Love is more than one set of glands calling to another. If you have trouble making a distinction you need Ann's booklet, "Love Or Sex and How to Tell the Difference." Meat Know How Can Save Money

BENTON — The loudest grumbling in the grocery store these days is usually heard at the meat counter. A "Sunday" roast now makes a sizeable dent in the food budget; a two pound pack of hamburger is nibbling more and more; and even chicken is beginning to lose its reputation as the economy buy it ONCE was.

"Meat now consumes about 30 cents of every food dollar" reports Miss Areva M. Abernathy, Area Home Economist, "and is expected to continue its climb. Meat prices rose 9.2 per cent from October 1971 to February 1972. This means that homemakers need to do an increasingly shrewder job of buying meat."

Homemakers cannot control the cost of food, but they CAN control the way they spend their money for it. This course has been designed to help them do it.

Break-Away Posts Apparently Save Life

JEFFERSON CITY — One motorist who is presumably alive today probably would have died Sunday morning if a safety feature called a break-away post had not been in use on two large highway signs on Interstate Route 70 near Kingdom City.

The motorist's car apparently hit one of the posts supporting the two signs, one 12½ by 13 feet and one 9 by 4 feet, one mile from the Mexico-Fulton exit on the eastbound lane of Interstate 70. The flattened signs were discovered at 8 a.m. Sunday.

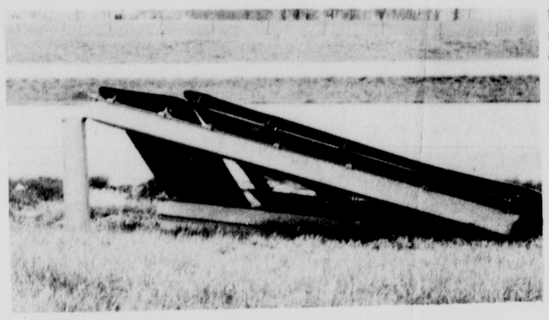
If standard metal posts had been in use, the car would have been damaged and the driver seriously injured or killed. With the break- away posts, he was able to continueon his way.

The Highway Patrol is attempting to learn the driver's identity and determine if the accident was a reult of his negligence as is apparent.

"It is ironic that the effectiveness of our safety device may make it impossible to discover who is responsible for the damage and it is unfortunate that the driver whose life was saved didn't have the decency to pay people of Missouri for the damage he did to their property," Robert N. Hunter, state highway department chief engineer, said. "But the important thing is that a life was saved."

The highway department has been replacing posts holding up certain of its large signs with break- away posts since 1967. When hit by a vehicle, the breakp aways swing forward allowing the vehicle to pass underneath. Ordinarily, other posts prevent the sign from falling on the vehicle.

The sigh hit Sunday did collapse, but it apparently stayed up long enough for the vehicle to pass safely underneath.



THESE SIGNS were discovered on Interstate Route 70 near Kingdom City about 8 a.m. Sunday. They had apparently been flattened by a car. Break- away posts, installed by the state highway department, prevented serious injury to and possibly the death of the driver, and apparently even prevented serious damage to the car because the driver was able to leave the scene.

WHEN A BREAK- AWAY POST is hit by a vehicle, it is knocked loose of the bolts at its foot and swings forward allowing the vehicle to pass safely underneath.

Dear Sir:

Last Sunday I visited Sells Nursing Home. I met a lady who, even though she only had one leg and was confined to a wheel chair, had such a cheerful dispostition she had every one in the room laughing. Her name was Thiel Lord. She said "If you live for the Lord you won't forget my name." I was so impressed I wrote this poem for her. Won't you print it just for her.

Now and then we meet a friend
We like right from the start.
Whose very presence in a room
brings gladness to our hearts.
It's friends like you, we need more of,
To make our day more bright,
To chase away the loneliness
That often comes at night.

A SONNET TO MY MOTHER
(on Her Day)

My dearest mother, on her special day
When she receives back payment (in small part)
For looking well when worried thoughts dismay;
Indeed, for looking well; for strength to start
A day of work when sleep is so inviting;
For common sense, and nonsense not so common;
For being worth the tribute of this writing;
For meanig well when meaning's lost (Amen!)
For sensitivity to people's charm
For deep brown eyes and making perfect meals
For being strong when weakness seems no harm;
Forgiving when the time is not ideal:
For all these things, I thank my father's wife --
For making all my waking hours her life.

Somehow things aren't the same without Mom around the house. Just ask Dad! He's the guy who suddenly finds out what it's like to feed the family, get them off to school, keep a tidy house and all the rest. It all happens in "The Family Circus" beginning Monday, May 15th, in your

What's The Law?

Discrimination In Jury Voids Acts

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

Horace didn't think a grand jury was so grand after it indicted him on charges of murder. What's more, he questioned the validity of their action when he later learned that, by state law, its members had to believe in God in order to qualify for that austere panel. Attacking the legality of the indictment in court, Horace was somewhat liveral but not excessively.

"Ive got nothing against believing in God," he told the judge. "The fact is, I'm a staunch believer in the Almighty myself. But," he added, "it's obviously a discriminatory practice to exclude people from sitting on the grand jury just because they're nonbelievers. Therefore, their indictment was as invalid as the religious qualification for their selection."

"He's gotta' be joking"' responded the prosecuting attorney. "Where could he get a better shake than before people who believe in God? Besides, he's got no complaint. He admits that even he believes in God."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you throw out the indictment rendered by the God-fearing grand jurors?

This is how the judge ruled: YES! The judge held that discrimination in grand jury selection renders their actions invalid. And, he noted, one of the classic examples of denial of equal protection of the laws is discrimination because of religious opinions. To exclude atheists from a grand jury, concluded the judge, is just such discrimination in favor of believers against nonbelievers.

Cradic Signs Cape Prep Stars

CAPE GIRARDEAU — Three members of the Cape Central High School basketball team which reached the Class L state quarterfinals during the past season will join the basketball program at Southeast Missouri State College next fall, Coach Bob Cradic has announced.

In addition, Cradic said a member of the team from Cape Girardeau's Notre Dame High School, which had a 13-9 record last season, plans to enroll at Southeast Missouri State.

He is 6-3 Don Buessink, who had a 14.3 average during the past season. He hit on 48 per cent of his field goal attempts and 72 per cent of his free throw attempts.

Players from Cape Central slated to join the Indians are 6-4½ Roland Daye, 6-4 Randy Carter, and 6-3 Mike Uhls. The Central team complied a record of 24-4.

Both Daye and Carter averaged 12 points a game for the Tigers during their senior year, while Uhls had a 10-point average.

Of the three Daye had the best rebound average as well as the best shooting percentage from the field, 49.8 per cent. Carter had the best percentage from the free throw line, hitting on 60.1 per cent of his charity tosses.

A WAY OF LIFE

LUSAKA, Zambia (AP) — Zambia will continue to declare seven-day periods of national mourning despite a complaint by athletes that a week-long break interferes with training. Sportsmen protested the latest mourning period which marked the deaths of 35 Zambians when an explosives train blew up. A government spokesman said such mourning periods must take place "in accordance with the African way of life . . ."

TRCC Ends Season

POPLAR BLUFF — Three Rivers Community college finished their baseball season with a 19-9 record by winning two of three games last week.

The Raiders won the Missouri Junior College Athletic Conference championship with an 11-4 slate making it the second year in a row the Joe Blemker's diamond men have captured the crown.

Three Rivers split with Florissant Valley of St. Louis, losing the first game, 8-5, and coming back in the nightcap to win, 6-5. The Raiders defeated Meramec Junior College, 5-3, Saturday.

In the game Saturday Meramec tied the score in the fourth. Meramec came back to score two more runs in the fifth. The Raiders took the lead for good in the sixth, scoring two of the three runs on suicide squeeze bunts.

Mike Webber picked up the win and Dan Eisen was the losing pitcher.

In the first game Florissant Valley jumped on John McCulloch for four runs in the first inning and added three more in the second. Three Rivers put on a rally of its own in the second. They got to Jack Bochantin for five runs but the Florissant pitcher settled down and shut out the Raiders the rest of the way for the win. Mark Sinovich hit a grand slam homer in the first.

In the nightcap Jim Smith had to relieve Swagman to pick up the win for the Raiders. Three Rivers battled from behind to salvage a split. The Raiders scored in the first frame and Florissant tied the game in the second and went ahead 2-1 in the third.

The Raiders tied the game in the fourth and rallied for three runs in the fifth to lead, 5-3, but Swagman was unable to hold his opponent at bay and Florissant tied the game in the fifth.

Three Rivers scored the winning run in the bottom of the eighth on a single by Bob McCulloch. McCulloch had four hits in five times at bat.

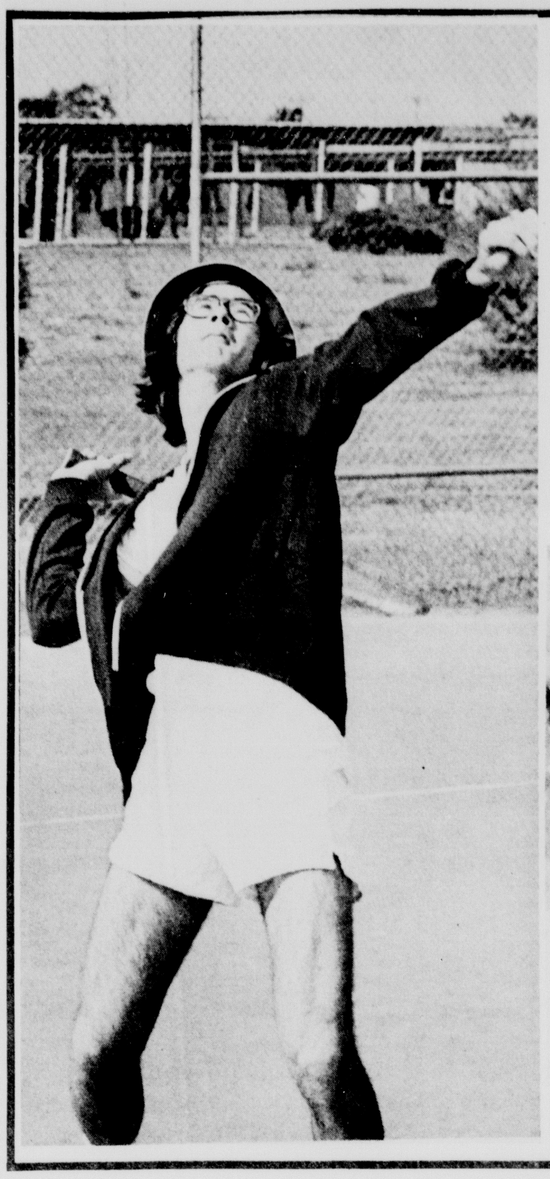
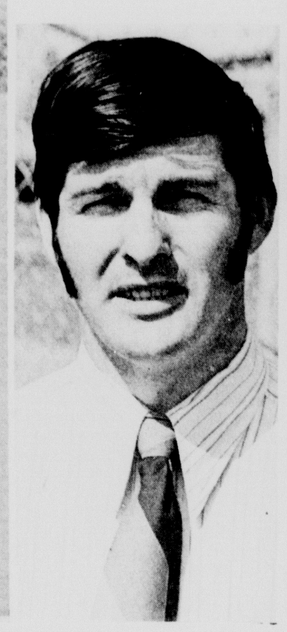
If you want bluebirds in a nesting box, discourage English sparrows during the spring season. An accurate pellet gun or 22 rifle, providing that safety is taken into consideration, will do. Once bluebirds have adopted a nesting box, they'll protect it themselves.





TENNIS STARS Brad Buchanan and David Hahs, will represent Sikeston high school in the state high school tennis tournament Thursday & Friday in Columbia. This is the first season that Sikeston will be represented in the state tournament. Buchanan was undefeated in nine matches and Hahs finished with a 7-2 mark. John Heacox is the coach.

Beer Service May Be Curtailed At Stadium

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Sportservice, Inc., is in violation of a Missouri liquor regulation through failing to keep enough financial records at Busch Memorial Stadium, state Liquor Control Supervisor Courtney Goodman Jr., said Friday.

Goodman postponed imposing a penalty on the firm until he takes another look at its financial records. The penalty could be a reprimand, or a suspension or revocation of the company's liquor license at the ball park.

Attorneys for Sportservice, a subsidiary of the Emprise Corp. of Buffalo, N.Y., wanted "to cooperate completely with the state," Goodman said after a hearing on the firm's operations.

At the hearing Charles Bailey, manager of the Busch concession, identified 13 lengthy financial statements. He said the records were maintained normally at the stadium.

Auditor Harold Brown of the Department of Liquor Control said when he examined stadium records in March he saw only a few of those presented at the hearing.

Missouri law requires that records be kept on the premises.

Sportservice also runs food and beer concessions at Kiel Auditorium and the St. Louis arena, as well as the American Royal Arena in Kansas City and Cahokia race track near East St. Louis, Ill.

Record Speeds At Indy

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Squeezing a few more miles an hour out of an engine already working overtime is a chore that often is a near impossibility.

Jim Malloy, a 39-year-old veteran race driver, knows just how difficult that is.

Malloy set the pace at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway during the first week of practice for the May 27 Indianapolis 500-mile race, turning in the top lap speed five of the first seven days of practice.

Then Bobby Unser, Peter Revson, Gary Bettenhausen and young Mike Mosley began to take turns sitting in the spotlight.

Malloy's top speed going into today's first day of qualifying for the race was 188.048 miles per hour, far short of Unser's 194.721 and looking too short for a run at the pole position today.

Actually, both those speeds are spectacularly above the official one-lap record of 179.354 m.p.h. and the official four-lap mark of 178.696 recorded by pole-winner Revson last year.

In fact, by Friday 20 drivers had jumped past the 180 m.p.h. barrier and another dozen or so were around or nearing the existing record for a single lap.

Malloy is trying to qualify for his fifth Indy 500. He finished fourth last year after suffering the embarrassment of going out in the pace lap of the 1970 race with a broken radius rod.

"We've been running right at 188 and we want to get it over 190. I feel we'll be able to qualify well," Malloy said.

"These engines are working harder than they've ever worked. I can guarantee you we'll have plenty of mechanical failures in the race, he said. "We've just never worked these parts this hard and long and nobody can be sure what will happen.

As if to prove his point, Malloy blew an engine Friday, spraying oil all over the track. It kept the 2 1/2-mile oval closed for more than an hour.

TRCC Stars To HSC

ARKADELPHIA, Ark. Two members of the Three Rivers Junior College varsity basketball squad, Steve Reynolds and Larry Wills, will attend Henderson State College this fall to play for the Reddies, according to HSC Head Basketball Coach Don Dyer.

Reynolds, a 6-4, 215-pound orward- post man, averaged 17 points per game and collected 229 rebounds for the Three River Raiders last season. He hit 47.6 per cent of his shots from the field and 77.1 per cent from the charity line and was an All- Conference selection.

Wills, a 6-2 guard, was the team's quarterback and average 9.5 points per game and collected 106 rebounds.

Both were regulars on the Three Rivers varsity that finished the season with a 22-9 season under Head Coach Gener Bess.

Coach Dyer says that Wills and Reynolds will add needed strength and depth to the Reddie squad and he is looking for help from both during their first season at Henderson State.

Six Grid Athletes To SEMO

CAPE GIRARDEAU — Thrower, head football coach at Southeast Missouri State College, has reached into two Illinois communities and one Arkansas town for six freshmen to augment his 1972 squad.

Scheduled to join the team this fall are Larry Goodman, Joe LeFrancois, and Fred Lucas, all of O'Fallon, Ill.; Fred Redd and Robert Naughton, both of Alton, Ill.; and Brad Ogden of Harrison, Ark.

The announcement of the six out- of- state recruits brings to 29 the number of players recruited for the Indians for next year. All but two will be freshmen.

All of the O'Fallon, Ill., players who will don Indian uniforms received mention on the All- Metro teams of the St. Louis area.

Lucas, a 6-1, 205- pound defensive end, was chosen for the first All- Metro East team. Goodman, a 5-8, 160-pound running back, was named all- conference and made the second All- Metro East team. LeFrancois, a 5-11, 190- pound center and linebacker was chosen for the all- district team and was voted to the All- Metro third team.

Both of the Alton players who plan to enroll at Southeast Missouri State are linemen. Redd, at 6-3 and 205 pounds, is a tight end. Naughton, 6-0 and 230 pounds is a defensive tackle.

The Arkansas recruit, Ogden, is a fullback. He is 5-10 and 180 pounds and made all- districtand all- state teams.

Pitchers Take Lumps

McLain Chased

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON Associated Press Sports Writer

The Baltimore Orioles and Oakland pitcher Denny McLain have a hitting problem. The problem is that the Orioles aren't hitting anybody nd everybody's hitting Denny.

The Orioles did manage six hits Friday night, which matched the total of their two previous games, but bowed to the Chicago White Sox and Wilbur Wood, 4-3.

The A's got McLain off the hook after the former superstar was rapped for four runs in the second inning by Boston, including home runs on Rick Miller and Tommy Harper, but lost 7-6 on Harper's second home run of the game in the 12th inning.

Elsewhere in the American League, Minnesota and Milwaukee battled 21 innings—one short of the longest night game in AL history—before play was suspended with a 3-3 tie to be resumed before today's regularly scheduled game, Texas downed Cleveland 3-1, the New York Yankees whipped California 6-3 and Detroit and Kansas City were rained out.

The White Sox jumped to a 40 lead against Mike Cuellar on a solo homer by Bill Melton— first of the season for the 1971 home run champ—a two-run blast by Dick Allen and Pat Kelly's run-scoring single.

The Orioles, held to two hits for seven innings, scored in the eighth on Andy Etchebarren's double and Bobby Grich's single and got two in the ninth on a walk, two singles and an error before reliever Steve Kealey retired Terry Crowley and Merv Rettenmund with two runners aboard.

Despite throwing more between assignments than at almost any time in his career, McLain was clobbered by Boston. He has surrendered 32 hits in 221-3 innings and has a 6.09 earned run average.

The A's tied the score with four runs in the fourth inning, three on Dave Duncan's homer and went ahead 6-5 in the seventh, only to have the Red Sox catch up in theninth on Ben Ogilvie's pinch single.

Little did pinch hitter Tommy Reynolds of the Brewers know when he stroked a two-run game-tying single in the seventh inning that he would start a long night's journey into day.

Neither team could manage another run before curfew rang after the 21st inning.

The longest night game in major league history went 24 innings in 1968 with Houston beating the New York Mets 1-0.

Ted Ford homered and three Texas pitchers combined for a seven-hitter as the Rangers dropped Cleveland out of first place in the AL East.

Ron Blomberg drove in the go-ahead run with a sixth-inning grounder after Roy White reached third on a walk, stolen base and wild pitch as the Yankees beat California. Blomberg then homered in the eighth.

"We want Willie! We want Willie! We want Willie" the fans chanted. And out of the New York Mets' dugout came—John Milner.

Willie Mays was making his debut Friday night in a New York uniform. But No. 24 never got the chance to show his stuff against his former team, the San Francisco Giants, much to the dismay of the 44,271 fans who jammed Shea Stadium hoping to get a glimpse of their newest hero.

It would have been perfect for baseball's top right-handed home run hitter to step up to the plate and crash his 647th over the wall.

The only problem, though, was that when a pinch-hitter was needed, a right-handed pitcher was on the mound for the Giants.

And so, with one one in the eighth inning, the Mets trailing 1-0 and the fans hollering for Willie, Mets' Manager Yogi Berra stayed with the percentages and sent up Milner, a rookie and, more important, a southpaw swinger.

"Boooooo!" the fans responded.

But the jeers turned to cheers as Milner worked Steve Stone for a walk and later came home with the tying run on Ken Boswell's double that knocked out the San Francisco starter.

The cheers continued in the ninth as the Mets loaded the bases with one out against reliver Jerry Johnson and Jerry Grote singled up the middle to give the Mets a 2-1 victory.

In Friday night's other National League games, Los Angeles defeated Philadelphia 6-1, San Diego beat Montreal 5-3, Pittsburgh topped Houston 4-2, the Chicago Cubs blanked Atlanta 2-0 and Cincinnati edged St. Louis 5-4.

"I felt sorry for the kid," Mays said of Milner, who had to face the wrath of the crowd. "But it didn't seem to bother him. And Yogi probably did the best thing by letting the kid bat."

Unbeaten Don Sutton finally gave up a run—he'd gone 31 scoreless innings—but couldn't have cared less.

"As long as we had five more than they did, I wasn't worried about that run," said the Dodger ace, who chalked up his fifth victory with a four-hitter against the Phillies.

Frank Robinson gave him all the backing he needed with a three-run homer in the fifth inning and Bill Russell added a solo shot.

"These young kids keep pulling together like this," Manager Don Zimmer said of his Padres, "and we might shake up the West Division a bit."

San Diego has done some shaking already by winning six of eight games. "These kids are all hitting. Nate Colbert and Leron Lee are leading it but Enzo Hernandez, Dave Campbell, Derrel Thomas—everybody's getting wood on the ball."

Lee did it against the Expos with a three-run homer. Campbell and John Jeter also delivered runs with singles. Mike Jorgensen cracked a two-run homer for Montreal.

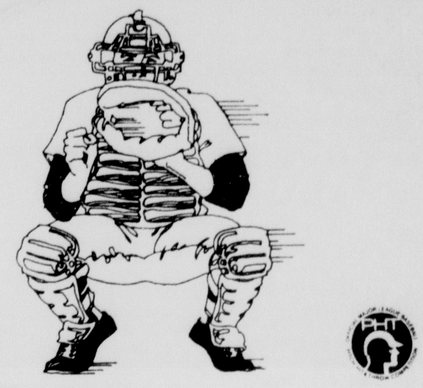
Milt May's tie-breaking single triggered a two-run Pittsburgh rally in the ninth that beat Houston.

The defeat was Houston's fourth in five games.

Bill Hands handled the Braves with ease, firing a fivehitter while his Cubs teammates jumped on Atlanta starter Ron Reed for a run in the second on Rick Monday's double and Jose Cardenal's single and another in the third on Randy Hundley's single and Glenn Beckert's double.

Joe Morgan cracked a tworun homer to power the Reds over St. Louis as Ross Grimsley, making his first start since being recalled from the minors, became only the second Cincinnati starter to pick up a victory.

Baseball Tips



5—Catching

(Fifth of 10 Parts.)

As catcher you are the defensive captain. You alone have all the playing field in front of you, putting you in a postion to call the shots.

Work out your signal for the pick-off play with each of the infielders. Don't make the signals complicated. Some examples: 1. Bare hand on knee means pick-off at first base. 2. Picking up dirt means pick-off play at second. 3. Glove hand to knee, pick-off at third base.

Also, you should have a return sign from the infielder so you're sure he knows. Otherwise you're likely to throw away the ball.

If no man is on base, the catcher should always get down the line to back up first base on a ball hit to the infield. He should run to a spot where he thinks the ball would go if overthrown.

Keep the signals to your pitcher simple. Agree before the game on signals to use.

When the pitcher is set to throw, get in crouched position on the balls of your feet. Hold the glove where you expect the ball to come.

Individual honors in the competition over the prr 70 Grandview Municipal course went to Stan Logan of Southwest, who posted a 70 and 72 for 142.

Bob Markovicz of Central and Randy Miller of Northeast tied for second with 144. Tied for fourth, each with 146, were Joey Kremer of Southwest, Bill Daniels of Northeast and Rodney Shell of Southeast.

The tennis and track championships started Friday and were scheduled to be concluded today. Rain hampered both events.

Northwest opened defense of its crown in tennis with 18 points. Northeast was right behind with 13. Then came Missouri Rolla with five, Southeast three, Southwest and Central one each and Lincoln none.

Six Northwest players were in action in the six flights today.

Ken Ault of Southwest Missouri won Friday's only track final, taking the 3,000-meter steeplechase in nine minutes, 22.1 seconds. It was the first time the MIAA has included this event in its track championships. The triple jump and discus were postponed until today.

Indiana Pacers Rookie Scores 30, Grabs 20

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — After the second game of the American Basketball Association championship playoffs, New York Coach Lou Carnesecca said Indiana's muscular 6-foot-8 235-pound rookie George McGinnis looked like a heavyweight contender.

Carnesecca amended his evaluation following the third game Friday night.

"Now, you can say he's the champion," said the diminutive Nets' coach, who barely would reach McGinnis' elbow.

Carnesecca made his reevaluation after the burly McGinnis had wrecked the Nets, scoring 30 points and grabbing a game-high 20 rebounds as the Pacers posted a 114-108 victory and took a 2-1 lead in the best-of-seven series.

"McGinnis was the key," continued Carnesecca. "We just couldn't stop him, especially in the third period."

The former Indiana University star, who dropped out of school after his sophomore season, scored nine points in the first five minutes of the third quarter, when Indiana took a lead it never relinquished.

McGinnis, whose pro career high is 35 points, said his performance against the Nets "was more sweeter than the other game, because it came in the playoffs."

Rick Barry, the leading scorer in the playoffs, led the Nets with 44 points, 24 in the first half. He now has a total of 107 in the three games.

But Barry and John Roche had their problems at the foul line, helping cause the Nets' defeat. Barry, the league's leading free throw leader during the regular season, hit only eight of 13 attempts and Roche, the rookie from South Carolina, was a woeful one-of-seven.

"When did you ever see Rick miss five or Roche go one-forseven?" moaned Carnesecca.

Roche was particularly upset with himself.

"I never missed six shots in any game during college or with the Nets this season," he said, "It was frustrating and embarrassing."

The Nets will get a chance to square the series Monday night in the fourth game at the Nassau Coliseum.

Growth, Better Management Urged In Catfish Farming

WASHINGTON (AP) — Catfish farming is not likely to replace cattle ranching as an income earner, but economists think there is room for growth and much better management in the finny business.

An Agriculture Department survey of catfish processing plants in the South, where most of the pond-raised creatures are produced, shows one of the biggest problems to be a yearround supply.

The report, published by the Economic Research Service, is based on studies of 16 catfish processing plants in 1970. Only three years earlier, the ERS said, no weatfish plants existed in the South.

Catfish farming has developed mostly in the past 10 years and in 1970 produced a harvest of more than 34 million pounds, double from the year before, according to the report.

Processing, however, is still in the throes of development. The 1970 study showed plants could process triple the volume of fish they were able to obtain and also were plagued by an erratic supply during the year.

Much of the catfish farm output is sold on a live basis to stock fishing ponds, to local consumers and as sporting catches to fishermen who pay fees to wet a line in a wellcrowded pool.

The 16 plants surveyed bought 6.4 million pounds of catfish in 1970, the report said. Farmers were paid an average of 35 cents per pound. The fish, after they were dressed, produced about 3.7 million pounds for wholesale at an average of 86 cents per pound.

Retail prices for fresh and frozen catfish ranged from an average of 93 cents per pound in December to a high of $1.02 in June, the report said.

Most of the fish produced are channel catfish, a type particularly suited for production, harvest and the consumer market, the ERS said. The fish reach eating size in about 18 months.

Studies show the catfish to be one of the best converters of feed into meat. On the average, officials say, two pounds of feed will produce one pound of catfish, putting them far ahead of cattle and other livestock.

Expect Demand For Soybean Oil To Grow

WASHINGTON (AP) — A trade team says demand for U.S. soybean oil is likely to grow during the next five to ten years in a number of countries throughout Latin America and the Mediterranean.

The team, sponsored by the Agriculture Department and the National Soybean Processors Association, recently returned from visiting a dozen countries in the two areas.

"A soybean crushing plant is now under construction in Greece, and each of the other Mediterranean countries visited except Morrocco expressed a desire for additional crushing facilities," the Agriculture Department reported Wednesday.

"Peru is currently importing U.S. soybeans, and the ominican Republic, Jamaica, Haiti and Panama are actively developing plans for soybean processing," the department said.

Corn Crop Brings Record $6.9 Billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says the 1971 corn crop was worth a record $6.9 billion to farmers, including government price support payments, despite sharply reduced market prices during the season.

Of the record 5.5 billion bushels harvested, according to an Economic Research Service report, farmers sold about 3.1 billion for a season average price of $1.08 per bushel for nearly $3.35 billion.

About 2.4 billion bushels of the 1971 crop was kept by producers for their own feeding operations and for seed, the report said.

When government price support payments were included, the average value of 1971 corn was $1.24 per bushel.

New Pandas Opposite 'As Night And Day'

WASHINGTON (AP) — If opposites attract one another Ling-Ling and Hsing-Hsing should get along famously when they finally meet.

"They're as different as night and day," says Larry Collins, zoologist who cares for the two gift pandas from China. "She's an extrovert and he's an introvert."

Ling-Ling, the female, likes to charge her keepers whenever they enter her cage at National Zoo, Collins said. HsingHsing, the male, just retreats quietly into a corner.

"He's kinda shy while she's the rough-and-ready type," he said.

Thousands of persons have trekked through the panda house since the rare animals arrived almost a month ago from Peking.

Recycling of Wastes Avoids Air Pollution

An increasing trend in the Missouri Bootheel to adopt laws prohibiting open burning of trash is causing area residents to seek other alternatives for disposing debris.

The federal government is applying more pressure on local governments to provide landfill trash disposal facilities.

With this in mind, many are seeking ways to recycle yard and garden wastes for use as mulch or a soil conditioner. Some are turning to shredder-grinders, or shredder-baggers which can reduce the volume of debris.

Instead of placing 10 or 12 bags of leaves for the trashmen to haul away, the shredders can chew up leaves, small limbs and even bottles, cans and small rocks, reducing the residue that must be hauled away.

As the increase in the use of the shredder-grinder continues, there is a heightened interest in the use of shredded materials turned out by these machines for recycling into the soil as compost.

All plant material, living or dead, succulent or woody, will decay in time. The composter speeds up decay in the compost pile by taking out twigs, sticks and non-green debris, then layering up the remainder in such a way that it decays rapidly.

Glass clippings, leaves, discarded plants from the flower beds and vegetable garden -- even the vegetable waste from the kitchen -- all go into the compost pile. If any diseased or insect infested plants are composted, the pile should be hot. The heat helps break down the material to its natural state.

The best form for composting varies with climate. In an arid climate or where the soil is sandy and fast draining, a compost pit is suitable. Above-ground compost piles process faster and are easier to handle. Minimum dimensions are four feet deep. Layers should be uniform and the pile should be slightly cupped at the top to catch moisture. The pile may be free-standing -- experts use this method -- or an area can be composed with removable wood sides, screen panels or stacked building blocks.

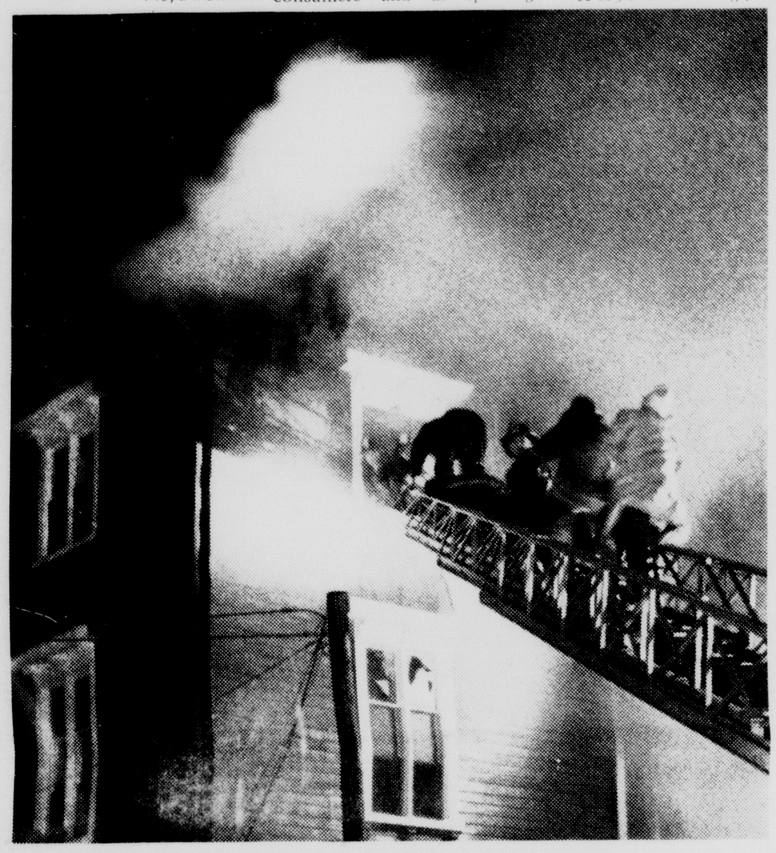
Most leafy materials go to the pile as is. If they are coarse, chop them up with a heavy knife. Corn stalks, dahlia stalks and other harsh materials should be shredded or chopped. Fine grass clippings should be mixed with coarser debris -- dried plant tops, weeds, etc. -- or they may make a soggy mass and putrefy instead of undergoing healthy decay.

Many organic gardeners manipulate their piles of garden debris and come up with more or less finished compost in two weeks or so. The average gardener makes compost one year to be used the next. It pays to have at least three piles going; old, earthy compost is ideal for potting soil mixtures, for digging into poor soil and to use when planting; compost at the cornflake stage makes fine mulch, can be spaded deep into subsoil to loosen it and is a suitable substitute for leaf mold.

A 10-bushel lot of garden debris will decay down to three bushels of cornflake textured compost, and ultimately, will be refined to between one and two bushels of fine, black humus.

Compost should be screened or shredded prior to use unless it has digested down to fine black humus. It can be spread with a scoop shovel. Spread it on the beds and spade it in. Double dig, and fork large amounts of coarse compost into the lower layer to improve drainage and begin the conversion of subsoil to loam. Compost used as a summer mulch on a crop can be spaded in after frost in the fall.

Compost is not primarily a fertilizer. It is a soil conditioner. It increases the humus content of the soil, converting clay to workable loam, and giving sandy or silty soil sufficient body to hold moisture and support a sturdy crop. It may have considerable nutritive value, particularly if the pile was layered up with barnyard manure or with bagged, dehydrated manure with or without the addition of a high nitrogen fertilizer (3:1:1) ratio) to speed up bacterial action.



BEFORE YOU CAN EVEN SAY "HELP" BILL LOWE IS THERE.

And you would have met him last April 10, if you'd been living at 80 St. Mark's Place on New York's Staten Island.

That night over 100 families were forced out of their apartments by a five-alarm blaze. And Bill was on the scene.

Not as a fireman, or a policeman, or even a fire buff. But as a Red Cross Volunteer. Rushing to find some beds for people in a nearby church. Rounding up sweaters and pants and shoes for people who'd lost just about everything. And passing around sandwiches and coffee to weary firemen and reporters.

That fire – and Bill's 7 hours on the scene – didn't make very big headlines in your morning paper. It wasn't that kind of "major disaster." But because there was a need for such assistance, the Red Cross was there to help. With volunteers like Bill.

Red Cross Volunteers – America's best neighbors – are the backbone of services like these, all across the country. People who give their time. And themselves.

Maybe you don't have a whole lot of hours to give to the Red Cross every month.

But think a little. Where do you fit in?

The American Red Cross.

Superior Shirt Being Developed

ATLANTA - For Father's Day next year, Dad will be able to put on a durable press shirt far superior to any available on the market today.

The prediction was made Thursday by S. Frank Moore, director of the Cotton Incorporated Research and Technical Services Center at Raleigh, N.C.

The shirt will be made of 60 per cent cotton and will be treated with a vapor phase finish developed by Cotton Incorporated, the research, sales and marketing company sponsored by America's cotton growers through their dollar-per-bale programs.

Moore told an audience of the American Cotton Shippers' Association that the vapor phase treatment is working well on garments with at least 60 per cent cotton. He said fabrics are being made already.

He also said that, for the first time in five years, on-farm and off-farm agricultrual research is being funded at higher levels than product research.

Cotton Incorporated will spend over $1 million more on agricultural research during fiscal 1973 than on product research. Yet product research is also being accelerated.

The trick, Moore said, lies in the Cotton Incorporated Research Center, now under construction in Raleigh and scheduled for occupancy in the early summer.

The new facility will enable Cotton Incorporated to conduct expanded research programs in its own laboratories -- at considerable savings of producer dollars.

The new research center will house an enlarged research and fabric evaluation laboratory and new biochemistry and product development laboratories.

The product development lab will contain some $400,000 worth of knitting machines.

"We are moving cotton into double knits," Moore promised the shippers. "No more 'hot' in the summer, 'cold' in the winter, plus snagging problems."

He said the technical services department is now in full swing and is receiving daily calls from the textile industry. Cotton Incorporated's technical service experts have visted plants of all the top 50 textile mills in its programs to service what it sells -- cotton.

Moore also discussed Cotton Incorporated's participation in the boll weevil eradication experiment and the company's research on short-season cotton and byssinosis.

The American Cotton Shippers' Association held its annual meeting at the Regency Hyatt House here.

Future Of Valley To Be Talked

MEMPHIS — Development of water and related land resources in the Lower Mississippi Valley, including the St. Francis River and tributaries, for the next 50 years will be discussed at a meeting in Memphis Tuesday.

The session will be held in the Passport Restaurant Meeting Room, Memphis International Airport, beginning at 10 a.m., and it will be open to the general public.

Presiding over the meeting will be Major Gen. Charles C. Noble, who is president of the Mississippi River Commission, U.S. Army Corps of Engineers in Vicksburg, Miss.

The meeting is part of a study to provide a broad guide for the best use of water and land to satisfy human needs for the next half century. The study includes the economic development and growth of both the Lower Mississippi Valley and the entire nation, preservation, enhancement, and rehabilitation of the environment, and -- as the main consideration -- the well- being of all the people. Among items being studied are water quality and supply, fish and wildlife, recreation, natural environment, soil and water conservation, flood control, navigation, bank stabilization, mineral resources, hydropower, and coastal and estuarine areas.

William A. Lee, chief engineer, Missouri Water Resources Board, who will represent Missouri at the conference, says seven States and 10 federal agencies are involved in the study. In addition to Missouri, participatingg States are Arkansas, Illinois, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, and Tennessee.

Additional information concerning the meeting or the study may be obtained from the Missuri Water Resources Board, P. O. Box 271, 308 East High, Jefferson City, Mo.

Worms In Grain And Fields

BLOOMFIELD — Armyworms are present in many small grain and pasture fields in Stoddard County, and heavy worm populations are being found in some fields according to Tom Brown, Area Agronomy Specialist.

Farmers are urged to keep a close watch on these crops, and spray when it becomes necessary.

Spray applications are recommended when an average of four or more non-parasitized, half- grown or larger worms per square foot are found. In order to find the worms, shake the plants vigorously and look carefully in the trash at the base of the plants. Worms are being found in all sizes; however significant numbers of worms large enough to do damage are being found in several fields. Considerable evidence of foliage feeding is being found in some fields.

Should spraying become necessary, toxaphene and trichlorfon (Dylox) are recommended for use in small grain fields. For control in pastures, carbaryl (Sevin), ethyl parathion, malathion, and toxaphene are recommended; however toxaphene should not be used on pastures to be grazed by dairy cattle. Cattle should be removed from pasture during the application of these insecticides.

Information pertaining to armyworm control may be obtained upon request from your County University Extension Center.

Fertilizer Vital For Bean Yields

The possibility of increasing soybean yields with fertilizers is a common topic among farmers these days. The importance of proper soil fertility has taken on added signficance the past two or three years. In general, soybeans have been mistreated when it comes to plant food, according to John Garrett, Area Agronomy Specialist.

Why are farmers becoming more conscious of the importance of this crop? I believe three of the biggest reasons are: (1) Acreage (2) Consistent Low Yields, and (3) Economic Importance.

Soybeans are grown on approximately one-half of the cultivated acres in Southeast Missouri. This means more soybeans are grown than all other crops combined. Missouri produces three million plus acres of soybeans each year. About 35 percent of these are grown in Southeast Missouri.

The increase in economic importance is a big factor in motivating farmers to do a better job of production. In general, soybeans have been planted, cultivated a couple of times and forgotten until harvest. The manager who does his best in production will stay on top. He should pay special attention to soil preparation, variety, date of planting, weed control, insect control, irrigation, harvesting and fertilizers.

The average yield for the past several years has been 22 bushels per acre. Many farmers are above this ,,,,but many harvest less. The question is often asked, "Will fertilizer increase soybean yields?" The answer is yes on medium to very low testing soils in phosphorus and potassium.

Before a farmer considers the possibility of applying fertilizers, he should have the soil tested. A good soil test is the first step in increasing yields. A soil test will give you a quick inventory of the plant food status of your soil, Garrett states. Your soil may not need fertilizer at all. A soil test will tell.

In general, the number one thing limiting soybean yields in SEMO is acid soils. Soybeans are a legume plant and require a pH of 6.0 to 6.5 for tip production. The average pH of Southeast Missouri soils in 5.1 ---- very strongly acid and far below the optimum pH level. Limestone is needed to correct acidity and supply calcium and/or magnesium.

The application of nitrogen for soybeans is not generally recommended because they have the ability to trap enough nitrogen from the air to supply most of their needs. In order for the soybeans to do this job. a favorable pH of 6.0 to 6.5 is needed, this will help increase the population of bacteria to fix nitrogen from the air.

A 40 bushel per acre soybean crop will contain approximately 150 pounds of nitrogen in the grain. Ten to twelve pounds of nitrogen, where recommended, applied in a complete fertilizer will often increase yields on low fertility, low organic matter soils of high pH. A small application of nitrogen will often increase yields on beans following wheat. More research is needed on the use of nitrogen on soybeans.

Phosphorus is necessary for good soybean production. Soybeans have a high phosphorus requirement. A 40 bushel per acre crop contains 35 pounds of P2O5 in the grain. Soils that test medium or lower in phosphorus should have 30 to 60 pounds of phosphate applied annually to prevent phosphorus deficiency.

Most of the soils in Southease Missouri are high in phosphorus, and additional phosphate is not needed for top yields. At least 30 percent of the soils are low to very low in phosphorus and need phosphate. The only way to tell if your soil needs phosphate is by soil testing.

Potash is required in large amounts by soybeans and all soils that test medium or lower should be fertilized with 30 to 120 pounds or potash per acre. When soils are limed, increased amounts of potash are used because bigger and better crops are grown after the soil is limed. A 40 bushel per acre crop of soybeans will contain about 55 lbs. of potash in the grain.

Next to lime, potassium is the most deficient plant food in Southeast Missouri soils. Many experiments have been conducted on different soil types.

In tests on soils testing 150 pounds of potassium per acre or less, 60 pounds of potash have increased yields an average of 7 bushels per acre. With potash selling at about five cents per pound, it would cost $3.00 an acre to apply 60 lbs. At $3.00 per bushel, the extra 7 bushels would return $21.00 an acre, for a net profit of $18.00 per acre.

Phosphate and potash can be applied about any time of the year. Four recommended methods are: (1) band 5 to 6 inches beside and below the seed, at or prior to planting: (2)broadcast and plow down or disk in: (3) band beside row shortly after emergence, and (4) fertilize previous crop, such as wheat or corn, heavy so soybeans can use the leftover fertilizer.

AS already mentioned, don't guess about soybean fertilization. Test your soil and find out the exact nutrient status. If your soil is acid, lime should be applied. If it is medium or lower in phosphours and or potassium, one or both of these nutrients should be applied.

Soil Meeting Plans To Be Made

BENTON — Scott County Soil and Water Conservation District directors will meet June 12 to discuss plans for the annual meeting.

Cotton Value Climbs Near $1.44 Billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sharply higher market prices helped boost the value of the 1971 cotton crop to nearly $1.44 billion, not counting government payments, the Agriculture Department announced Mond ay.

The season average price for all cotton produced last year was 28.62 cents per pound, compared with 21.98 for the 1970 crop. Total market value of 1970 production, not counting payments, was $1.12 billion.

Including government payments, 1971 cotton was worth $2.26 billion, compared with $2.01 billion for 1970 production, officials said.

Those figures did not include the value of cotton seed, put at $241.1 million for 1971, compared with $229.6 million for 1970.

State Looks For Rising Exports

JEFFERSON CITY — Gov. Warren E. Hearnes has proclaimed May 22-27 as World Trade Week in Missouri in keeping with a national observance to call attention to the economic and social importance of world trade.

Commissioner of Agriculture Dexter Davis, president of Mid-America International Agri-Trade Council -- composed of 12 Midwest states that includes Missouri -- reports, "I'm vitally concerned tha Missourians recognize the impact that world trade has on their every day lives, their income and standard of living, and that there exists a continuing need for expansion of Missouri exports, especially of agricultural products."

According to the commissioner, Missouri exports of agri-products makes up about 15 per cent of the total state agricultural income.

Dear Charley.

I have finally figured out a way to end the war. Take the rocks the government traded a 9 million dollar cart to the moon for, and draft a few Mountain Boys to throw them and I think we can win it easy.

Isn't it wonderful what you can dream up after a few cold cans of Budweiser Beer?

Your old friend,
The Mayor of Dog Trot,
Charley Henson

Leming Hall Walk Offered at Cape

CAPE GIRARDEAU -- A sentimental journey through Leming Hall, a 1905 dormitory soon to be razed to make way for a new student union building at Southeast Missouri State College, has been added to the list of commencement day activities at the college.

An open house will be held from 1:30 p.m. - 4 p.m. Sunday at the dormitory, which holds many memories for thousands of Southeast Missouri State alumni.

The college's Board of Regents decided at its last meeting to locate the new union there following a recommendation of a site selection committee consisting of students, faculty members, and administrators.

It was pointed out at that time that Leming Hall is in a poor state of repair, and experts have estimated it would cost at least $350,000 to repair it.

No time has been set for demolition of the structure to begin, but in all probability the women living there now will be the last to do so.

Leming, which fronts on Normal St. just west of Kent Library, was originally built as a private endeavor primarily through the efforts of three men, Leon J. Albert, M. E. Leming, and Louis Houck. It was purchased by the college in 1912 for about $85,000. The hall has a capacity of 120 women.

For many years Leming and Albert Hall, which was east of Kent Library, were the only residence halls on the Southeast Missouri State campus. Albert Hall went by the wayside a number of years ago to make way for a much larger dormitory complex, Dearmont Quadrangle.

The idea for the open house at Leming Hall was suggested by Miss Hattie L. Eicholtz, director of alumni affairs at the college. She lived there as a child with her mother who was the head resident at that time, and sister.

President Mark F. Scully immediately accepted the proposal and appointed a committee headed by Mrs. Lyman Evans, associate professor of art at the college, to develop the plans. Details are being worked out this week.

Interchange On I-57 To Be Replaced

JEFFERSON CITY — Construction of a new Interstate 57 interchange at Highway 62 east of Charleston is planned to eliminate a dangerous interchange, Robert N. Hunter, chief engineer of the Missouri Highway Department, said Thursday.

The triangular- shaped interchange, complicated by the intersection of old Route UU, has been the scene of several accidents in the past year, including two fatalities.

The new diamond- type interchange planned would be similar to the South Main overpass at I-57 in Charleston, Hunter said.

The new interchange had been scheduled for construction with the nine-mile section of I-57 from Charleston to the proposed bridge that would take the interstate across the Mississippi River.

Doyle L. Murphy Promoted To Major

After completing officer training he attended the infantry officer basic course at Fort Benning, Ga., in 1954. In 1957 Major Murphy returned to Fort Benning where he completed the infantry officers advanced course.

During 1958 he attended the army fixed wing flight school at Fort Rucker, Ala., followed by attendance at the army rotary wing (helicopter) school in 1960.

Certified as both an airplane and helicopter pilot Major Murphy spent 12 years in flying assignments, most of which was spent with the 635th aviation company, Warrensburg.

Major Murphy is self employed as a farmer. He lives at 208 Kramer Drive, Sikeston, with his wife, Betty Carol, and their two sons, Mark, 16, and Robert 5.

Dear Editor:

As of January 1, 1972, eighty- eight (88) members of the United Nations were in arrears on their dues payments in the total amount of $186,867,884., according to The Congressional Record. However, forty- five (45) of these nations in arrears voted against the U. S. on the Red China- Taiwan issue!

Article 19 of the United Nations Charter denies a country in serious arrears its vote in the General Assembly. Thus all nations in arrears had no legal right to vote on the Red China- Taiwan issue, and if they did so, their votes were illegal.

Why didn't the United Nations deny them the right to vote? Perhaps Red China has no legal right to be seated. Why hasn't this been questioned by the Administration and Congress?

More Hanky- Panky!!

Sincerely,

South Vietnamese Recapture Quang Tri Province Today

SAIGON (AP) — South Vietnamese marines opened a counteroffensive in Quang Tri Province today and, flying their nation's flag as they landed, recaptured the first piece of territory from the North Vietnamese in the northern front.

The attack began with a lightning airborne assault that drew U.S. Marines back into the war for the first time in more than a year. The Americans flew the South Vietnamese in on helicopters.

South Vietnamese flags could be seen from the My Chanh River flying in the breeze as the South Vietnamese marines reoccupied Hai Lang district town to the south of the city of Quang Tri, which fell to the North Vietnamese May 1. It was the first counteroffensive on the northern front.

South Vietnamese forces liberated a number of civilians who had been hiding in the area for several days, the Saigon command said. They were taken to My Chanh, five miles to the south.

Field reports indicated the South Vietnamese marines ran into strong resistance at some points in the drive north, but heavy U.S. air strikes sent some of the North Vietnamese troops fleeing in apparent disarray and many of them were caught in the open by bombs.

The action is not expected to have a real effect on anticipated North Vietnamese plans to attack Hue, 25 miles south of Hai Lang. It is not in an area where the expected attack on Hue is expected to come from.

In the southern region, heavy fighting raged for the third straight day at An Loc, the long-besieged provincial capital 60 miles north of Saigon. North Vietnamese troops made repeated bloody attacks on the city, which President Nguyen Van Thieu has ordered held at all costs.

The U.S. Marine helicopter crews in Quang Tri Province— the northernmost area in South Vietnam—were the first Marine air units recommitted to the vietnam war since April 1971, when Marine air forces were withdrawn under President Nixon's pullout program.

Associated Pre ss corresponden Peter Arett reported from the northern front that the U.S. Marine helicopter crews were from the carrier Okinawa. They landed 1,000 South Vietnamese marines into Hai Lang district town on the southern edges of Quang Tri City, the provincial capital.

The airlifted South Vietnamese marines, joined by a cloumn of 500 Saigon marines moving on foot, reoccupied the district town in less than three hours, Arnett reported.

Arnett said one big CH46 Seaknight helicopter was destroyed by the Americans themselves after it was disabled on the ground by a mechancial failure. There were no US.. casualties and no U.S. ground combat troops were involved.

Soviet Ships Head Toward Haiphong Port

LONDON (AP) — The British Broadcasting Corp. reported today that Moscow radio says eight Soviet merchant vessels are steaming for the mined North Vietnamese port of Haiphong.

The BBC quoted the radio as saying the heavy tonnage ships were carrying fertilizers, agricultural machinery and food and clothing.

It said the ships were crossing the Indian and Atlantic oceans and were ahead of their schedules. It did not say when they were due to arrive off North Vietnam.

The Japanese Defense Agency had reported Friday that two Soviet warships were snotted moving south into the East China Sea north of Vietnam.

Alaska Oil Pipeline Urged

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The U. S. Interior Department says an Alaska oil pipeline poses a greater spill risk than one through Canada, but the latter route would cause more damage because of the greater degree of permafrost.

A lengthy study by the department indicated that a route through Canada would be less damaging to the environment because it could share a common land barrier with a possible natural gas pipe under consideration by several oil and gas companies.

But, said Interior Undersecretary William T. Pecora, a Canadian line would require extensions east and west to the U.S. Midwest and the West Coast.

"Inevitably much actual disruption would result," he declared. A consortium of seven oil companies that would construct the trans- Alaska pipeline are also involved in the trans- Alaska gas pipeline.

The proposed 48- inch oil pipeline would run 789 miles from Prudhoe Bay to the ice-free Alaskan port of Valdez. It would cost an estimated $5 billion.

The pipeline would take about three years to build and would carry some 500,000 barrels of oil each day by 1975, rising to 2 million barrels by 1980, the Interior Department said.

Pecora indicated that the spill risk of an Alaska line would not pose much of a problem.

"It has not been shown that chronic minor spillage of oil does any actual damage," he said.

An environmental impact survey by the department said, however, that spillage caused by oil transfers and tanker ballast-cleaning at Port Valdez could result in "a gradual buildup and accumulation of pollutant hydrocarbons" in the water.

This spilled oil "could ... possibly affect areas far distant from the original discharge site," it said. The impact statement said oil pollution would be costly to both salmon fishermen and the Alaskan herring industry. It added that shellfishing "would be restricted and perhaps lost entirely for unknown lengths of time."

"It is likely that the commercial and recreational harvest of Dungeness crabs in Port Valdez would be lost as a result of normal terminal operations," the report said.

Pecora cautioned that "it is important to distinguish between actual alteration and potential threats to the ecology in constructing a pipeline to bring oil from the North Slope of Alaska."

"As was noted in the impact statement," he said, "...a pipeline across Alaska would cause less known damage than the Canadian route.

"This is true chiefly because the Alaska route would be far shorter than any pipeline through Canada."

Two Killed In Apartment Fire

CAPE GIRARDEAU — A man and woman were killed when fire of undetermined origin swept through a two-story frame apartment building early this morning at 123 South Pacific.

Dead are Van Crain, 23, of 2013 Brink, a sailor, and Mrs. Kathy Seibert, 27, of Scott City. She is the wife of James Seibert, a Scott City high school coach who was in Columbia for a track meet at the time of the fire. She was a legal secretary.

Crane's body was found on the floor of the family room of the Dan Wiethop apartment where he collapsed while apparently trying to reach the kitchen door. Mrs. Seibert's body was found in a closet in the kitchen. Officials said she had apparently made a left turn into the closet instead of a right turn out the back door while tryingto escape. Both died of suffocation according to Cape Girardeau County Coroner Herbert E. Riehn.

Firemen were called when Wiethop, who owned the building discovered the fire at 4:20 a.m. Assistant Fire Chief Rich May said when firemen reached the building flames were shooting through windows and doors.

Wiethop told firemen, that he, Crain, Mrs. Seibert, and other couples had been to a night club in East Cape,Girardeau, Ill., until

$31 Million Share In U.S. Budget

Scott County's share of the cost of the federal budget is $31.3 million, according to figures released by the Missouri Public Expenditure.

Missouri's share is $5.3 billion, which equals one of every $4 personal income of Missourians.

Total federal revenues are estimated at $220.8 billion in the budget for the fiscal year beginning July 1 and expenditures of $246.3 billion, leaving a deficit of $25.5 billion.

Revised revenue and expenditure estimates for the current fiscal year indicate a deficit for this year of $38.8 billion, the survey said. As recently as last September, that deficit had been estimated at $28 billion. The federal debt is now estimated to be $493.2 billion on June 30, 1973.

Missouri's share of the federal budget is computed at 2.16 per cent of the total budget, the survey said, under a formula developed over a number of years by Tax Foundation, a governmental research organization with headquarters in New York.

Other Bootheel counties and their share of the budget include:

Mississippi, $12.7 million.
New Madrid, $15.9 million.
Stoddard, $21.4 million
Pemiscot, $19.8 million.
Dunklin, $28.2 million.

Major Breakthrough In Control of Mosquitoes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government scientists say they have scored what could be a major breakthrough in the control of disease-bearing mosquitoes without the use of DDT or other chemical pesticides.

Agriculture Department scientists, who directed the research, say the use of tiny parasitic worms which bore holes in mosquito larvae "holds particu lar promise" for controlling the insects.

The tiny worms, called nematodes, are being field-tested by the U.S. Public Health Service in El Salvador and by the World Health Organization in Taiwan and Thailand.

A key to the experiment was the development of a low-cost method of mass producing a species of nematodes, Reesimermis nielseni, which attack only mosquitoes.

The procedures are described in the May issue of "Agricultural Research," a magazine published by USDA.

At present, DDT is the cheapest and favorite pesticide for controlling mosquitoes in malaria areas of the world. Malathion, a potent but less persistent chemical, also is used.

Laboratory tests over a twoyear period have shown the worms infect 13 of 19 known kinds of mosquitoes in Louisiana and have a 100 per cent kill record among insects they infect, USDA scientists say.

Although mosquitoes are the natural and only known hosts for the r. nielseni nematode, the worms usually kill only while the mosquitoes are in the "wiggler" or larvae stage of development.

The larvae develop from eggs and, if they survive, turn into adult mosquitoes which then can carry many diseases, including sleeping sickness or encephalitis as well as malaria.

ARS scientists say that mass production of the worms will enable man to spread them over large areas artifically, much the same as chemicals are applied now.

As with all control measures, however, there are drawbacks.

Rail Strike Averted

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's railroads and the Sheet Metal Workers union agreed on a new contract today, a railroad spokesman announced, averting the threat of a strike May 31.

Chairman William H. Dempsey of the National Railway Labor Conference, bargaining agent for the railroads, said the agreement is in line with the industry pattern of a 42-percent increase over 42 months.

Dempsey said he could not disclose specific terms of the new contract until it is ratified by the 6,300 members of the Sheet Metal Workers' International Association.

The contract, retroactive to Jan. 1, 1971, must be approved by the Pay Board before it can be implemented, Dempsey said.

Settlement of the 18-month dispute signals the final agreement with all of the 15 unions the railroads have negotiated with on a national basis, Dempsey said.

He said the only remaining dispute in the industry is between Penn Central Railroad and the United Transportation Union over the size of freight train crews.

He said the Sheet Metal Workers' contract also provides for retention of the so-called incidental work rule, which allows a member of one union to do the work ordinarily done by another union under certain circumstances.

Dempsey said the contract followed recommendations of Presidential Emergency Board 181, which was appointed by President Nixon in March to avert a strike.

The board held hearings on the dispute in Washington during April and made its report to Nixon May 1.

14 Die In Bus-Truck Crash

BEAN STATION, Tenn. (AP) — Fourteen persons were reported killed and 15 injured, four critically, early today when a Greyhound bus and a tractor-trailer collided near this onetime stage coach station. The truck burst into flames.

The dead included the drivers of both vehicles and at least two children, authorities said.

Three of the injured were able to be taken into private homes at nearby Morristown after emergency hospital treatment.

The Greyhound company at Roanoke, Va., which said the bus was due there this morning, identified the driver of the bus as Frank Flick of Roanoke. The driver of the truck was not identified immediately.

Morristown-Hamblen Hospital said most of the injured were from the Norfolk, Va., area. The bus was headed in that direction, from Knoxville, about 40-45 miles southwest of the wreck site.

The four persons most seriously injured were taken to hospitals in Knoxville and Kingsport.

The wreck occurred about 5 a.m., about 100 yards in front of the home of Jesse Coffee, 27.

"It sounded like a case of dynamite went off," said Coffee. "It jarred the whole house. Then everything was quiet and all we heard was a baby crying."

He said he and his wife rushed outside and found the baby, lying in a ditch between two adults who were dead. Before ambulances arrived, he said, he personally removed three men, two women and two children from the bus. One of the children was dead, he said.

Morristown-Hamblen Hospital spokesmen said 14 bodies were in the hospital conference room, where officials were seeking to identify them. Two of the bodies were of children.

"We treated three of the injured and released them, and they went to private homes here in Morristown," a nurse in the emergency room said.

"One was a woman, the other was a baby and I think the third also was a woman. But we've been so busy I can't say for sure."

It could not be determined immediately if the baby released by the hospital was the same one found by the Coffees, but Coffee said that infant appeared to be all right. Other neighbors said several other survivors scrambled to safety from the wrecked bus.

The truck, which the Tennessee Highway Patrol said bore Alabama license plates, was loaded with a cargo of vinyl floor covering and drums of tar-like glue for applying it. The cargo burst into flames almost immediately, the Tennessee Highway Patrol said.

In Washington, the National Transportation Safety Board said it was sending experts to the scene to take charge of the investigation. There was no obvious explanation for the wreck, which apparently occurred on dry pavement before showers moved into the area.

WE KNOW WHO THE PIGS ARE

One does not have to go outside of the New York City to see what the civilization and culture of the nation would be if the hippies, radicals, Communists, far-out liberals and like-minded persons took over the country. We have in New York a large laboratory demonstration of the future as they envision it.

The latest indication can be viewed on the Columbia University campus, where students and outsiders raised in the permissive way of life have vandalized the facade of a beautiful new building opened in 1971, the School of International Affairs. Large statements crudely painted in red (the lettering leans drunkenly) attack Professor Andrew Cordier, dean of the school, and praise MAO as a hero.

Other indications of things to come if the nation should go irrevocably to the people who call policemen "pigs" are also present on the campus. Only a few years ago it was a pretty area in a deteriorting district. There were many grass-covered quadrangles bordered by hedges or flowers. Now most of the quadrangles have been trampled into mud or dust, and those which are green are under attack.

The defacement of other areas of the city goes on apace. The subways are being steadily polluted and silted up by the graffiti of the illiterate and nearly illiterate. If this is the handwriting on the wall, we are in serious trouble.

SHADES OF THE CORN BLIGHT

The corn blight that dismayed farmers in 1970 came back to haunt consumers this year. The spurt in the consumer cost of beef from November to February was popularly blamed on greedy ranchers and gouging supermarket owners. But the single most important factor was probably the poor corn crop in 1970. The shortage brought rising corn prices and resulted in the higher cost of feeding cattle in 1971.

The blight loomed large last spring when farmers were working out their planting plans. Rather than risk another poor year, the Agriculture Department authorized a larger than normal acreage for corn. The result was a record crop of 5.5 billion bushels and corn was piled up in the streets of some Iowa towns because there was no room for it in the local elevators. Given the choice, some farmers might have preferred a touch of the blight.

The Agriculture Department sees no danger of blight this year. Thus its efforts are geared to holding down corn production as much as possible. Basically, it has offered 80 cents a bushel for corn the farmers opt not to grow. Still, the crop is expected to be 5.1 billion bushels, as against anticipated needs of 4.8 to 4.9 billion. A spokesman for the Department told Editorial Research Reports that a shade over 58 million acres is expected to be planted to corn this year -- only 7-1/2 per cent less than last year.

There are several imponderables in any estimate. A cold, wet spring has delayed corn planting across the Midwest. And if the late-starting crop bumps up against an early onslaught of winter, the yield might be less than demand. Whatever happens, consumers are not immune. They will feel the effects sometime later as the corn is converted into beef, eggs, and milk.

PERFECTLY

Would you vote for a presidential candidate who made the following speech?

"The stock market will plunge and inflation and unemployment will be about 6 per cent. I will initiate wage and price controls and they will fail. I will have a secret plan for ending the war that will be secret improvisations.

"I will dispense with a foreign advisor accountable to the Congress and appoint instead a member of my staff. That will bring about equality: The Congress will know as little about our foreign commitments as do you, the people.

"I will devalue the dollar,

"I will set a new record -- a $47 billion deficit budget. In fact, during my first term I will be responsible for 25 per cent of the Nation's national debt.

"I will be known by the companies I keep -- Lockheed and ITT."

Congressman James Symington suggested something like the above would have been a straightforward speech by Presidential Candidate Nixon in 1968 -- or a report to the Nation of his four-year stewardship.

The Congressman concluded:

"Democrats who think President Nixon is unbeatable need therapy."

I'D BE CYNICAL
OF ME

George C. Wallace is a demogogue. His grasp of economics is rudimentary. But he has a knack for putting his finger on the issues that have left a large part of the U. S. electorate bitter, disillusioned, and resentful.

Last week, he said to a reporter (page 60): "I'll tell you what people don't like. The average man is cynical of all politicans and officeholders now. I just happen to be one of the anti - establishment kind, and if I was up in the establishment, I'd be cynical of me."

In so saying, he summed up what many be the most important issue of all in the 1972 elections. The public has been deceived, hoodwinked, and manipulated at every level of government from White House to county court house. It believes neither the statements of its elected officials nor the promises of office-seekers. It has lost in large measure the basic faith that makes the democratic process work.

George Wallace would have good reason to be cynical about himself should he bulldoze his way into the establishment. But the candidates who are running against him should ponder what he has said. The public desperately wants someone who will tell it the truth and restore its faith.

At this point, the field is wide open. — Business Week.

For several months, reports on the economic situation in the nation have varied from very bleak to bright. Some of the reports have been nothing more than guesswork. Some have been designed to serve political purposes.

In the face of conflicting reports, is there any way for the retail merchant to get a true picture of his potential sales for 1970?

Yes. A few reports are based on facts. Perhaps the most reliable are the figures of the Federal Reserve Board. This disinterested agency indicates that 1970 is going to be an exceptionally good year for the retailer. the volumne of spring shopping, according to the Federal Reserve Board, is running well above last year's volume. During the first week in July department stores did more business than they did in 1969.

Dun and Bradstreet, reliable source of information on market conditions, supports the optimism reflected in the Federal Reserve Board estimates. The firm reports retail trade "smartly" above a year ago.

Another sign worth noting: The nation's largest retail store has announced that it will spend more on newspaper advertising in 1970 than it has during any previous year.

Of course some retail stores have lost business because of localized unemployment. In general, however, the retail merchant should be doing better than he did in 1969.

Apparently some retailers are assumbing that things are going to get worse before they get better. This attitude can certainly make the assumption true. It leads to a reduction in advertising and promotion which drives business to other stores. There is good evidence that the consumer has money to spend, and that he is spending it where he is being sold by strong local advertising.

FOR IVAN, RUBLES
NO OBJECT

The United States spends less than one-half of 1 per cent of its Gross National Product on space activities. According to the best estimates, the Soviet Union spends about 2 per cent of a GNP half as large.

This means that dollar for dollar or ruble for ruble, the Soviet Union spends twice as much on space as does the United States.

Despite this fact, there is little evidence of grumbling among Russians that these billions might better be devoted to pressing domestic problems. Lest you jump to the conclusion that this is because Soviet citizens have little say in the running of their country, be advised that the reason is quite otherwise.

Asked to explain it, Dr. Boris N. Petrov, director of the Soviet Academy's Intercosmos Branch, the Soviet NASA, offered: "Probably that is connected with the fact that many social problems in the Soviet Union are already solved or are being successfully solved."

Having achieved paradise on earth, or almost, can the Russians be blamed for reaching to the heavens?

FALSE SECURITY

Everyone dreams of escaping the turmoil of life. Some go to considerable length to achieve this dream, only to find that in the end there is no alternative but to sink or swim with the rest of their fellowmen. Smart people endeavor to hedge against inflation in countless ways from buying diamonds and land to speculating in the stock market. Others try to dodge rising crime and violence by buying homes in protected areas. One of these, a thousand-acre tract near Houston, Texas, is an electronically fortified city surrounded by a wall six-feet high, protected by guards and individual security systems in each home.

Eventually, it is expected that as many as 200,000 people will live in this single compound. As one observer notes, the citizen who seeks security in this manner is probably doomed to disappointment, and "... by retreating into a walled city, he is cutting off his only real chance for survival." Survival depends upon all of us supporting law enforcement agencies, the rights of persons and property -- and elected public officials who shun the temptation of paving the road to public office with taxpayers' dollars.

"What do you want now, daughter? Haven't I just set your husband up in business?"

"Yes, sure, Dad — but now he wants you to buy him out."

Dinner With Comrades: Waterfront Unions Say USSR Doublecrossed Them And Nixon; Threaten to Paralyze Trade With Soviets.

WASHINGTON — There has been a series of high-level telephone conversations so sensitive that to report them would harm this nation. That's not my thing. But what can be disclosed is that early Wednesday morning (May 10) a Cabinet official hit the phones with a series of invitations to waterfront labor leaders to come for cocktails and dinner at the Blair House at 7:30 p.m., May 15--

These calls went out some 36 hours after President Nixon's mine -the- harbors speech. They were made by Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Maritime Affairs Andrew Gibson. He spoke for his chief, the official Blair House host, Secretary of Commerce Peter Peterson -- who on Monday night was entertaining Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin at dinner. They took time out to listen to Mr. Nixon's TV speech and went back to talking business -- lots of business, trade business.

For the moment the subject is mostly grain business. The "Socialist camp," according to official records, has "no other source to go to except us for feed grains." And they need them. And the U.S. has been shipping the Soviets at least $136 million worth of corn, oats and barley all through these months -- and even these very hours of tension.

Most of $100 million worth of corn and oats has already gone over from such ports as Baton Rouge, New Orleans, Galveston and Houston. About $30 million worth of barley is being shipped via the Great Lakes from Duluth.

These grains have been dispatched to feed the Soviet citizenry (and their vita livestock) while Moscow has reciprocated by secretly dispatching artillery and tank to North Vietnam such a American intelligence has never seen. Take the President's word on that. The nature of the Red weapons, not their quantity, came as a surprise to the President.

During the past weeks, at least one Russion trade delegation. and in the past few days, two of them, have been in the U.S. bargaining for further trade. This could run into billions of dollars over the next few years. Perhaps not. It depends on the Soviet priorities -- and, you can believe it, the willingness of the American waterfront unions to work the future shipments.

Our maritime labor chiefs say they've been double-crossed by the Soviets -- and so do some of the top U.S. government officials of a small "inner circle."

First it should be recalled that Teddy Gleason's International Longshoremen's Assn. (ILA) (AFL-CIO) for over 20 years has refused to handle Soviet ships. Last October the question of loading the $136 million worth of grain was laid on Teddy's desk. There was a long conference of waterfront leaders at Cherry Hill, N.J. They had been pressured by several Cabinet members to work the grain. They agreed-- on one condition. And that was thet in the future, American freighters and tankers manned by American seamen, would carry half the cargo in any Russian trade deal. Moscow agreed. They needed the grain.

This time the corn, oats and barley would go over in third-nation ships. No Russian craft. Gleason agreed. But it was for a one-shot deal. At 6 p.m. Nov. 5, 1971, President Nixon telephoned to thank him, to say he didn't differ from Gleason in his opinion of the Communists but the U.S. just had to get into this international trade "for the good of the U.S. itself."

Then new Moscow-Washington trade talks began. At first the Soviets dispatched a high Maritime Ministry delegation. And in the past week there came the highly placed friend of Soviet Communist Party General Secretary Leonid Brezhnev, N.S. Patolechev.

They want to buy. But they don't want to ship the stuff "50-50" or in any other proportion in American ships. To expensive. They prefer the low rates of low-wage nations merchant marine fleets -- and some of them pay their seamen $40 to $50 a month. That's slave wages.

There's the Socialist Fatherland for you. So the American waterfront labor leaders decided to stand by their "bilateralism" agreement which permitted the original $136 million grain deal to flow. They want the "50-50" agreement to stand. Literally hundreds of millions of dollars in cargo carrying charges are involved -- which means tens of thousands of seagoing jobs. If the Soviets have their way, the American seafarer will starve "on the beach."

The Longshoremen, on whom all trade shopments depend, are standing solid with the seagoing unions. No "50-50"-- no trade. Which means that President Nixon could not guarantee any trade compacts. So Andy Gibson hit the phones Wednesday morning to invite Gleason, as well as Seafarers' leader Paul Hall, Maritime Union chief Joe Curran, and Marine Engineers President Jesse Calhoon, to come and dine and maybe to "bargain" a bit with Patolechev.

And it's far more than a footnote to report that Gleason accepted though there's supposed to be a national dock strike in the air - so it doesn't appear, does it that Teddy is gung ho for strangling the nation's ports

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — President Nixon is again releasing selective information from his secret advices in an attempt to manage the Vietnam news.

He has taken excerpts out of context which give a misleading impression of Vietnam developments.

The White House has spread the word, for example, that the mining of Haiphong harbor will affect the fighting in Vietnam within two or three weeks. Sources with access to the secret estimates flatly dispute this. Although the predictions vary, most estimates warn that Gen. Vo Nguyen Giap, the fabulous North Vietnamese commander, has enough men and material at the fighting fronts to last three or four months.

The secret reports express grudging admiration for Giap's genius at moving supplies under hazardous, almost impossible conditions. The American high command still can't figure out how he moved Soviet tanks, heavy artillery and antiaircraft missiles into South Vietnam without American planes spotting and destroying them.

In any case, the intelligence reports claim only about one-third of the Soviet equipment reaches North Vietnam by ship. Our most massive bombing has also failed to halt the flow of enemy armaments over the land supply routs.. The secret consensuns, therefore, is that the President's drastic actions in the North will have only a minimal effect on the fighting in the South.

Earlier, the President quoted Gen Creighton Abrams, the American commander in Saigon, as saying the South Vietnamese army was fighting courageously and well. Sources with access to Abrams's secret reports tell us this message was taken out of context. Actually, Abrams had raised grave questions about the South Vietnamese military leadership, battle tactics and dependence on air support.

The Abrams message, which the President quoted, intended to convey in its full context only that the South Vietnamese were fighting better than the General had expected.

The President's foreign policy czar, Henry Kissinger, has also told the press that Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev led him to believe in Moscow that a Vietnamese settlement would come from renewed negotiations.

Sources with access to the full text of the Kissinger-Brezhnev talks agree that the Soviet leader encouraged the United States to renew negotiations. But Brezhnev was emphatic in declaring that the Soviet Union would not intervene to arrange a settlement and would not decrease its arm shipments to North Vietnam. Brezhnev suggested only that the Vietnamese war need not jeopardize Russian-American relations.

Clearly, the President, in taking the American people into his confidence about the Vietnamese war, is playing the old game of pick -and- choose.

SEC Connivance

The Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC), which is supposed to guard the public against corporate conniving, has joined the connivers in a multimillion-dollar case.

The commission has shown a strange concern for the welfare of American Electric Power, the nation's largest electric holding company, which is dead determined to take over an Ohio electric company worth $500 million.

To help grease the political skids, American Electric has mobilized senators, congressmen, mayors and other influential figures. Indeed, the SEC staff has accused American Electric's lawyer lobbyist, Arvin Alexander, of soliciting letters "designed to improperly influence" the SEC proceedings.

But the commissioners seem more impressed with a corporate giant and its political allies than with their own staff. For example, the commissioners, headed by Chairman William Casey, have sided with American Electric in its efforts to bypass the staff hearing examiner, Irving Schiller.

Although Schiller has worked four years on the case, the commissioners notified him in a blunt, one -page memo that they want to take the case away from him and decide it themselves. The bold Schiller, however, is resisting.

An SEC staff team, headed by Gruff, grizzled Sol Freedman, has also fought in behalf of the consumers against the American Electric takeover. The staff accused the company of "unwholesome and retaliatory actions...aimed at a witness."

But the commissioners killed subpoenaes designed to get the truth of these charges.

From our own sources and 30,000 pages of official evidence, we have discovered a variety of pressure tactics used by American Electric. Consider these examples;

- We found a 1969 letter from Mayor M.E. Sensenbrenner of Columbus, Ohio, suggesting that then-Senator Stephen Young, D-O., approach "the staff or members of the SEC" to help swing the deal for American Electric.

- Sen. Robert Taft, R-O., asked acting Attorney General Richard Kleindienst to intervene in behalf of American Electric. This awkward request was made while Kleindienst was under Senate fire for intervening in the ITT case. The embattled Kleindienst refused to help the corporate utility.

- American Electric fired Prof. James Nelson, who had been retained by the company as a lecturer, after he testified against the takeover. Ironically Nelson was going to teach the corporate executives about public utilities regulations.

Meanwhile, American Electric has come up with a dubious settlement offer. Even if it is accepted, the settlement could require further lengthy hearings at the SEC. Footnote: It is worth mentioning that Don Cook, American Electric's president and chairman, once served as chairman of the SEC which now seems so eager to help his company.

Cook was out of the country and couldn't be reached. His executive vice president, Herbert Cohn, denied that there had been any improper pressures in the SEC proceedings. He declared: "If you talk with anyone in the area (served by the Ohio company) -- press, chamber of commerce, political officials -- you'll find that they are very interested in bringing American Electric Power in. They think it would be in the best interests of the area.

Paris Talks Four Years Old Today

PARIS, (AP) — Four years ago today a distinguished American diplomat and a dignified North Vietnamese representative shook hands to launch the Vietnam peace conference.

W. Averell Harriman, an ambassador-at-large, and Xuan Thuy, once foreign minister of North Vietnam, greeted each other in the hopeful glow of chandeliers at the sprawling International Conference Center. Crowds of newsmen and other onlookers along sunny Avenue Kleber speculated on how soon a peace treaty would be signed on the big felt-covered conference table.

Today a couple of lonely policemen watch over the deserted conference building. Metal barriers with no crowds to hold back snake along its front. Peace negotiators are blocks away contemplating if or when the talks—suspended by the United States nine days ago—will resume.

The conference broke down amid charges and countercharges which rang through the meeting room in almost the same way as they had four years ago.

Harriman then accused North Vietnam of moving "substantial and increasing numbers of troops and supplies" into the South.

It was ridiculous, Thuy reported, to say "that the northern part of Vietnam carries out aggression against the southern part."

At the last session of the conference nearly four years later U.S. Ambassador William J. Porter put it this way to Thuy: "You continue your massive invasion in the most flagrant violation of the 1954 Geneva Accords..."

Thuy came back: "The U.S. talk about North Vietnam invading South Vietnam... is a sheer fabrication."

The peace talks began May 13, 1968, and dragged on through October.

The peace conference took on two more participants in January 1969—the Viet Cong and South Vietnam, but only after Saigon had stalled for weeks over the shape of the conference table.

From then until now the peace conference has sputtered through 149 sessions, and on only one thing do the participants agree: there has been no progress.

But the Avenue Kleber meetings were only the tip of the iceberg. Underneath, during much of the period of public fencing, there have been secret talks.

One series was conducted between Henry Cabot Lodge, Harriman's successor, and the North Vietnamese. Lodge's successor, David Bruce, had one secret session. Dr. Henry Kissinger, President Nixon's national security adviser, has held 13 sessions with the North Vietnamese.

The latest meeting broke up May 2 amid the same charges and countercharges.

Communist Ships Keeping Distance

WASHINGTON (AP) — Adm. Thomas H. Moorer, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff indicated today Communist freighters are still staying several hundred miles away from Haiphong Harbor, sealed off by U.S. minefields.

Moorer said in an interview that the closest freighter was in the South China Sea about on a line with the demilitarized zone separating North and South Vietnam.

This would suggest that the Russians and other countries with ships inbound to North Vietnam have no immediate intention to challenge the U.S. mine barrier, placed in the entrances of Haiphong, North Vietnam's chief port, and six other smaller ports.

Moorer said there had been no significant ship movements overnight since a Pentagon spokesman reported Friday that several merchant ships heading for North Vietnamese ports apparently had changed course.

An estimated 25 Russian and other vessels have been reported en route to North Vietnam, but officials have refused to pinpoint their locations. These ships were at sea, reportedly strung out over many hundreds of miles, when President Nixon ordered the U.S. mining operation designed to prevent war supplies from reaching North Vietnam at a time when Hanoi's troops are mounting a serious offensive against South Vietnam.

Asked whether the Communists may have decided to outflank the mine barrier and land cargo in southern Chinese ports, Moorer said, "that's an alternative."

The nation's top military officer said the Chinese would have to agree to this and to supply railroad rolling stock to carry the diverted cargoes into North Vietnam by train.

Draft Maximum After June To Be 35,000

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird announced Saturday that a maximum of 35,000 young men will be drafted in the last six months of this year.

He told a group of civic leaders this will bring the year's total inductions into the armed services to not more than 50,000.

This will be roughly half the 98,000 men tapped by the draft in 1971.

The quota for the last half of 1972 represents a steep increase over the 15,000 young men to be called in the first six months through June.

The small draft quota for the first half of 1972 was levied because the Defense Department was drastically reducing total U.S. arms strength during this period, at least partly under congressional mandate.

As of the last official report, there were 2,385,194 men in uniform on March 31. This means that the total in the armed services is about 6,000 men below what President Nixon had projected for the end of June, beating the budget manpower deadline by three months.

EPA Refuses To Delay Auto Emission Rules

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency has refused to delay enforcement of the governmentordered regulations on auto emission standards for 1975 model year cars. But auto makers have indicated the fight is far from over.

EPA Administrator William D. Ruckelshaus Friday turned down requests by the auto industry for a one-year extension of the requirements of the 1970 Clean Air Amendments.

The amendments require a 90 per cent reduction of carbon monoxide and hydrocarbon emissions for 1975 model year cars, compared with the 1970 emission levels. However, Ruckelshaus is permitted to grant a one-year suspension if the auto industry is unable to develop the necessary technology for compliance.

Ruckelshaus said he was unconvinced the five auto companies could not meet the standards, despite their testimony in 2,000 pages of application and 13 days of public hearings.

The EPA decision was immediately criticized as impactical by the auto industry.

Gerald C. Meyers, an American Motors vice president, said, "We stand on what we told the EPA about our position that the technology does not exist. There is not time to develop it for 1975 model production ..."

Ford, General Motors and Chrysler agreed. GM said, "Not even a single experimental car of any manufacturer has been able to pass the 1975 certification tests in accordance with EPA procedure."

Several environmentalists expressed concern over concessions that Ruckelshaus said would be allowed.

Instead of requiring that each automobile off the assembly line meet the individual standards, he said the law would permit averaging of test results to meet the standards.

Ruckelshaus said he also would permit one change of the chemical catalysts used by the antipollution device chosen by auto makers as their first line of defense against pollution.

Barbara Reid, a spokesman for four environmental groups, said permitting a catalyst change instead of requiring a single chemical charge to last the full 50,000 miles of warranty would put the burden of maintenance on the car owners.

Rep. Paul G. Rogers, D-Fla., House author of the 1970 law, said the Ruckelshaus decision "fully backed the intent of Congress. This may well be the crucial decision that shows we do intend to clean up our environment."

Suit Demands End To Vietnam War

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Ecologist Barry Commoner and Teamsters Union official Harold Gibbons have filed suit against the federal government demanding an end to the war in Vietnam.

The suit filed in U.S. District Court Friday contends President Richard M. Nixon has refused to stop the war as ordered by Congress.

It asks for an injunction to stop Nixon from refusing to set a definate date for U.S. withdrawal. The suit also asks to stop the refusal to negotiate in good faith with the North Vietnamese.

Commoner and Gibbons were joined in the suit by physics professor Dan Bolef of Washington University, Army Sgt. Sanford J. Berger of Ft. Leonard Wood, Mo. and the Vietnam Veterans Against the War.

The federal government has 60 days to reply to the court action.

Guidelines On How To Break Up A Marriage

Dear Ann Landers: Recently you printed eight suggestions on how to break up the marriage of a son or daughter. I would like to add two more. These are guaranteed to work. I know because they destroyed my marriage. Here they are:

(1) Whenever your married son and daughter visit with their children, make a point of how thin and tired the kids look. Get across the message that you don't have a very high opinion of the way your beloved grandchildren are being cared for. Intimate that the mother's neglect is detrimental to the health of the youngsters. Ask repeatedly what they eat and why it is that they have so many colds. If the kid breaks a tooth or is injured during play, get all the details and place the blame on lack of supervision.

(2) If your son has a button off his shirt or if his shirt isn't ironed as well as you used to do it when he lived at home, say something. Also mention the hole in his sock or the spot on his coat. It will fan the flame of self-pity and it could start the final fight that ends in the divorce court.

I hope you will reprint the original eight rules along with the two additional suggestions as a refresher course for in-laws. The divorce lawyers from coast to coast are sure to profit from a re-run. Thank you. — It Happened In New Mexico.

Dear N. Mex.: Thank you for two splendid additions to the original eight ways to break up a marriage. For those who didn't see the first eight, here they are:

(1) When a son or daughter lets you know they plan to be married, show open hostility to the person of his choice. After all, marriage means less love and attention for parents and they have a right to resent it.

(2) Expect your married children to spend every Sunday and holiday at your home. Act hurt if they have other plans.

(3) If your married children have problems with their mates, encourage them to come home, no matter what. Listen attentively to all complaints and point out additional faults which may have gone unobserved. Remember, a drop of water at a time can wear away a rock -- if you keep at it long enough.

(4) If your married children are having financial problems, rush in with the checkbook. If you are having financial problems, yourself, borrow, if necessary, but let them know they'll never have to do without anything so long as you are around.

(5) If a married child has a drinking problem, keep telling him his mate drove him to it. It will make him feel better. Everyone needs someone to blame.

(6) If your married child gets an opportunity for advancement which takes him to another city, tell him family is more important than money and if he leaves, God will punish him for not obeying the commandment, "Honor they father and thy mother."

(7) If there are grandchildren, smother them with gifts. If the parents object, tell them to keep out of it. After all, grandchildren are to spoil. Sneak money to the kids secretly if you have to. They'll love you for it.

(8) If your married child has a difference of opinion with his mate, get into the act and give them both a sample of your wisdom born of years of experience. What do THEY know? You've lived! If you talk loud enough, maybe you can turn a minor argument into a major hassle and break up the marriage.

Confidential to Friendly Al: Stop being so "friendly" or you'll wind up paying her bills again, Dummy.

Don't flunk your chemistry test. Love is more than one set of glands calling to another. If you have trouble making a distinction you need Ann's booklet, "Love Or Sex and How to Tell the Difference." Send a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope with your request and 35 cents in coin to this newspaper.

Lila Harwell Honored By Beta Sigma Phi Chapters

Mrs. J. R. Harwell, Jr., 214 Powers, was honored at a dinner last night by the three chapters of Beta Sigma Phi at the Holiday Inn.

Mrs. Harwell was presented the order of the rose by members of three chapters, Xi Epsilon, Tau and Delta Gamma. It is the highest award given by Beta Sigma Phi, a social and cultural organization.

Helen Gravett of Kansas City, an international representative, was presented. Mrs. Harwell is the first person in this area to receive the award.

To be eligible for the award a woman must have been in Beta Sigma Phi at least 15 years. Mrs. Harwell has been the social sponsor of the three chapters from 1950 until 1960. The organization disbanded and was started again by Mrs. Harwell in 1966.

Members from Xi Epsilon Zeta participating in the rituals ceremony were Erma Braswell, Velva Parrish, Jewell Bell and Jolene Walker; Tau chapter, Bea Stauffer, Nadine Collins, Lucy Chambers, and Myrtle Nunnelee; Delta Gamma chapter, Kristin Lewis, Prissy Righter and Marie Lester.

Dorothy White of Tau chapter was the master of ceremonies.

Meat Know How Can Save Money

BENTON — The loudest grumbling in the grocery store these days is usually heard at the meat counter. A "Sunday" roast now makes a sizeable dent in the food budget; a two pound pack of hamburger is nibbling more and more; and even chicken is beginning to lose its reputation as the economy buy it ONCE was.

"Meat now consumes about 30 cents of every food dollar" reports Miss Areva M. Abernathy, Area Home Economist, "and is expected to continue its climb. Meat prices rose 9.2 per cent from October 1971 to February 1972. This means that homemakers need to do an increasingly shrewder job of buying meat."

Homemakers cannot control the cost of food, but they CAN control the way they spend their money for it. This course has been designed to help them do it.

15 Scouts Receive Awards

Fifteen Girl Scouts received the highest award given in Girl Scouting in the annual first class awards ceremony at Southeast Missouri State College, Cape Girardeau. The ceremony was for girls in the Otahki and Cotton Boll councils.

Libby Walker, Lee Ann Yeargain, Sandy Spurlin, Linda Brown Peques, Debbie Aduddell and Vickie Ahart, members of Cadette troop 159 under the leadership of Mrs. Harold Yarbrough and Mrs. Dwayne Smith.

Scouts and their families were greeted by Mrs. Thursdon Hill, Dexter, president of the Cotton Boll Council and Mrs. H. S. Williams, Chaffee, president of Otahki Council and Dr. Mark Scully, president of Southeast Missouri State College.

Presenting the awards and paying tribute to Girl Scout leaders was Mrs. Muriel L. McArthur, Cape Girardeau, executive director of Otahki Council.

Break-Away Posts Apparently Save Life

JEFFERSON CITY — One motorist who is presumably alive today probably would have died Sunday morning if a safety feature called a break-away post had not been in use on two large highway signs on Interstate Route 70 near Kingdom City.

The motorist's car apparently hit one of the posts supporting the two signs, one 12½ by 13 feet and one 9 by 4 feet, one mile from the Mexico-Fulton exit on the eastbound lane of Interstate 70. The flattened signs were discovered at 8 a.m. Sunday.

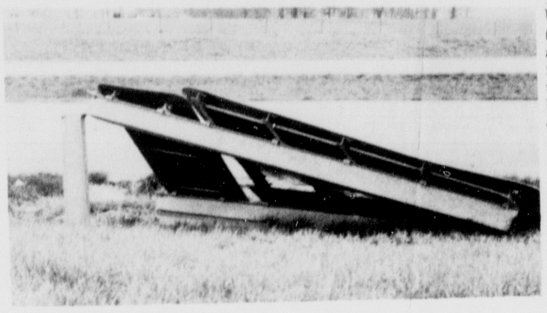
If standard metal posts had been in use, the car would have been damaged and the driver seriously injured or killed. With the break- away posts, he was able to continueon his way.

The Highway Patrol is attempting to learn the driver's identity and determine if the accident was a reult of his negligence as is apparent.

"It is ironic that the effectiveness of our safety device may make it impossible to discover who is responsible for the damage and it is unfortunate that the driver whose life was saved didn't have the decency to pay people of Missouri for the damage he did to their property," Robert N. Hunter, state highway department chief engineer, said. "But the important thing is that a life was saved."

The highway department has been replacing posts holding up certain of its large signs with break- away posts since 1967. When hit by a vehicle, the breakp aways swing forward allowing the vehicle to pass underneath. Ordinarily, other posts prevent the sign from falling on the vehicle.

The sigh hit Sunday did collapse, but it apparently stayed up long enough for the vehicle to pass safely underneath.



THESE SIGNS were discovered on Interstate Route 70 near Kingdom City about 8 a.m. Sunday. They had apparently been flattened by a car. Break- away posts, installed by the state highway department, prevented serious injury to and possibly the death of the driver, and apparently even prevented serious damage to the car because the driver was able to leave the scene.

WHEN A BREAK- AWAY POST is hit by a vehicle, it is knocked loose of the bolts at its foot and swings forward allowing the vehicle to pass safely underneath.

Dear Sir:

Last Sunday I visited Sells Nursing Home. I met a lady who, even though she only had one leg and was confined to a wheel chair, had such a cheerful dispostition she had every one in the room laughing. Her name was Thiel Lord. She said "If you live for the Lord you won't forget my name." I was so impressed I wrote this poem for her. Won't you print it just for her.

Now and then we meet a friend
We like right from the start.
Whose very presence in a room
brings gladness to our hearts.
It's friends like you, we need more of,
To make our day more bright,
To chase away the loneliness
That often comes at night.

A SONNET TO MY MOTHER
(on Her Day)

My dearest mother, on her special day
When she receives back payment (in small part)
For looking well when worried thoughts dismay;
Indeed, for looking well; for strength to start
A day of work when sleep is so inviting;
For common sense, and nonsense not so common;
For being worth the tribute of this writing;
For meanig well when meaning's lost (Amen!)
For sensitivity to people's charm
For deep brown eyes and making perfect meals
For being strong when weakness seems no harm;
Forgiving when the time is not ideal:
For all these things, I thank my father's wife --
For making all my waking hours her life.

CAPE GIRARDEAU — A 1928 graduate of Southeast Missouri State College who has been a professor of education at Memphis State University for many years in retiring, and teachers in West Tennessee are being asked to set up an endowment fund of at least $10,000 to establish an annual award in his honor.

The award, which will carry a $500 stipend, in honor of Dr. Earl Crader will be presented to a teacher "exhibiting commitment to the democratic process, the importance of human relations, and to acadenic feeedom."

Dr. Crader taught in southeast Missouri public schools and was superintendent of schools at Diehlstadt piror to going to Memphis State. He has a doctor of education degree from George Peabody College in Nashville.

A printed list of donors to the fund will be on display next fall at the annual meeting in Memphis of the West Tennessee Education Association and will be presented to Dr. Crader.

Safety Record Wins Citation

JEFFERSON CITY -- Billy N. Carrol of Sikeston was one of 25 highway maintenance area supervisors honored at a luncheon Thursday for not having a serious accident in 1971.

Carroll, supervisor for district 10, has had a perfect record for four years.

Commission chairman Jack Stapleton, Sr. and chief engineer Robert N. Hunter presented the awards to the supervisors, who accepted on behalf of their crews.

What's The Law?

Discrimination In Jury Voids Acts

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

Horace didn't think a grand jury was so grand after it indicted him on charges of murder. What's more, he questioned the validity of their action when he later learned that, by state law, its members had to believe in God in order to qualify for that austere panel. Attacking the legality of the indictment in court, Horace was somewhat liveral but not excessively.

"Ive got nothing against believing in God," he told the judge. "The fact is, I'm a staunch believer in the Almighty myself. But," he added, "it's obviously a discriminatory practice to exclude people from sitting on the grand jury just because they're nonbelievers. Therefore, their indictment was as invalid as the religious qualification for their selection."

"He's gotta' be joking"' responded the prosecuting attorney. "Where could he get a better shake than before people who believe in God? Besides, he's got no complaint. He admits that even he believes in God."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you throw out the indictment rendered by the God-fearing grand jurors?

This is how the judge ruled: YES! The judge held that discrimination in grand jury selection renders their actions invalid. And, he noted, one of the classic examples of denial of equal protection of the laws is discrimination because of religious opinions. To exclude atheists from a grand jury, concluded the judge, is just such discrimination in favor of believers against nonbelievers.

Cradic Signs Cape Prep Stars

CAPE GIRARDEAU — Three members of the Cape Central High School basketball team which reached the Class L state quarterfinals during the past season will join the basketball program at Southeast Missouri State College next fall, Coach Bob Cradic has announced.

In addition, Cradic said a member of the team from Cape Girardeau's Notre Dame High School, which had a 13-9 record last season, plans to enroll at Southeast Missouri State.

He is 6-3 Don Buessink, who had a 14.3 average during the past season. He hit on 48 per cent of his field goal attempts and 72 per cent of his free throw attempts.

Players from Cape Central slated to join the Indians are 6-4½ Roland Daye, 6-4 Randy Carter, and 6-3 Mike Uhls. The Central team complied a record of 24-4.

Both Daye and Carter averaged 12 points a game for the Tigers during their senior year, while Uhls had a 10-point average.

Of the three Daye had the best rebound average as well as the best shooting percentage from the field, 49.8 per cent. Carter had the best percentage from the free throw line, hitting on 60.1 per cent of his charity tosses.

A WAY OF LIFE

LUSAKA, Zambia (AP) — Zambia will continue to declare seven-day periods of national mourning despite a complaint by athletes that a week-long break interferes with training. Sportsmen protested the latest mourning period which marked the deaths of 35 Zambians when an explosives train blew up. A government spokesman said such mourning periods must take place "in accordance with the African way of life . . ."

TRCC Ends Season

POPLAR BLUFF — Three Rivers Community college finished their baseball season with a 19-9 record by winning two of three games last week.

The Raiders won the Missouri Junior College Athletic Conference championship with an 11-4 slate making it the second year in a row the Joe Blemker's diamond men have captured the crown.

Three Rivers split with Florissant Valley of St. Louis, losing the first game, 8-5, and coming back in the nightcap to win, 6-5. The Raiders defeated Meramec Junior College, 5-3, Saturday.

In the game Saturday Meramec tied the score in the fourth. Meramec came back to score two more runs in the fifth. The Raiders took the lead for good in the sixth, scoring two of the three runs on suicide squeeze bunts.

Mike Webber picked up the win and Dan Eisen was the losing pitcher.

In the first game Florissant Valley jumped on John McCulloch for four runs in the first inning and added three more in the second. Three Rivers put on a rally of its own in the second. They got to Jack Bochantin for five runs but the Florissant pitcher settled down and shut out the Raiders the rest of the way for the win. Mark Sinovich hit a grand slam homer in the first.

In the nightcap Jim Smith had to relieve Swagman to pick up the win for the Raiders. Three Rivers battled from behind to salvage a split. The Raiders scored in the first frame and Florissant tied the game in the second and went ahead 2-1 in the third.

The Raiders tied the game in the fourth and rallied for three runs in the fifth to lead, 5-3, but Swagman was unable to hold his opponent at bay and Florissant tied the game in the fifth.

Three Rivers scored the winning run in the bottom of the eighth on a single by Bob McCulloch. McCulloch had four hits in five times at bat.

If you want bluebirds in a nesting box, discourage English sparrows during the spring season. An accurate pellet gun or 22 rifle, providing that safety is taken into consideration, will do. Once bluebirds have adopted a nesting box, they'll protect it themselves.

TENNIS STARS Brad Buchanan and David Hahs, will represent Sikeston high school in the state high school tennis tournament Thursday & Friday in Columbia. This is the first season that Sikeston will be represented in the state tournament. Buchanan was undefeated in nine matches and Hahs finished with a 7-2 mark. John Heacox is the coach.

Beer Service May Be Curtailed At Stadium

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Sportservice, Inc., is in violation of a Missouri liquor regulation through failing to keep enough financial records at Busch Memorial Stadium, state Liquor Control Supervisor Courtney Goodman Jr., said Friday.

Goodman postponed imposing a penalty on the firm until he takes another look at its financial records. The penalty could be a reprimand, or a suspension or revocation of the company's liquor license at the ball park.

Attorneys for Sportservice, a subsidiary of the Emprise Corp. of Buffalo, N.Y., wanted "to cooperate completely with the state," Goodman said after a hearing on the firm's operations.

At the hearing Charles Bailey, manager of the Busch concession, identified 13 lengthy financial statements. He said the records were maintained normally at the stadium.

Auditor Harold Brown of the Department of Liquor Control said when he examined stadium records in March he saw only a few of those presented at the hearing.

Missouri law requires that records be kept on the premises.

Sportservice also runs food and beer concessions at Kiel Auditorium and the St. Louis arena, as well as the American Royal Arena in Kansas City and Cahokia race track near East St. Louis, Ill.

Record Speeds At Indy

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Squeezing a few more miles an hour out of an engine already working overtime is a chore that often is a near impossibility.

Jim Malloy, a 39-year-old veteran race driver, knows just how difficult that is.

Malloy set the pace at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway during the first week of practice for the May 27 Indianapolis 500-mile race, turning in the top lap speed five of the first seven days of practice.

Then Bobby Unser, Peter Revson, Gary Bettenhausen and young Mike Mosley began to take turns sitting in the spotlight.

Malloy's top speed going into today's first day of qualifying for the race was 188.048 miles per hour, far short of Unser's 194.721 and looking too short for a run at the pole position today.

Actually, both those speeds are spectacularly above the official one-lap record of 179.354 m.p.h. and the official four-lap mark of 178.696 recorded by pole-winner Revson last year.

In fact, by Friday 20 drivers had jumped past the 180 m.p.h. barrier and another dozen or so were around or nearing the existing record for a single lap.

Malloy is trying to qualify for his fifth Indy 500. He finished fourth last year after suffering the embarrassment of going out in the pace lap of the 1970 race with a broken radius rod.

"We've been running right at 188 and we want to get it over 190. I feel we'll be able to qualify well," Malloy said.

"These engines are working harder than they've ever worked. I can guarantee you we'll have plenty of mechanical failures in the race, he said. "We've just never worked these parts this hard and long and nobody can be sure what will happen.

As if to prove his point, Malloy blew an engine Friday, spraying oil all over the track. It kept the 2 1/2-mile oval closed for more than an hour.

TRCC Stars To HSC

ARKADELPHIA, Ark. Two members of the Three Rivers Junior College varsity basketball squad, Steve Reynolds and Larry Wills, will attend Henderson State College this fall to play for the Reddies, according to HSC Head Basketball Coach Don Dyer.

Reynolds, a 6-4, 215-pound orward- post man, averaged 17 points per game and collected 229 rebounds for the Three River Raiders last season. He hit 47.6 per cent of his shots from the field and 77.1 per cent from the charity line and was an All-Conference selection.

Wills, a 6-2 guard, was the team's quarterback and average 9.5 points per game and collected 106 rebounds.

Both were regulars on the Three Rivers varsity that finished the season with a 22-9 season under Head Coach Gener Bess.

Coach Dyer says that Wills and Reynolds will add needed strength and depth to the Reddie squad and he is looking for help from both during their first season at Henderson State.

Six Grid Athletes To SEMO

CAPE GIRARDEAU — Thrower, head football coach at Southeast Missouri State College, has reached into two Illinois communities and one Arkansas town for six freshmen to augment his 1972 squad.

Scheduled to join the team this fall are Larry Goodman, Joe LeFrancois, and Fred Lucas, all of O'Fallon, Ill.; Fred Redd and Robert Naughton, both of Alton, Ill.; and Brad Ogden of Harrison, Ark.

The announcement of the six out- of- state recruits brings to 29 the number of players recruited for the Indians for next year. All but two will be freshmen.

All of the O'Fallon, Ill., players who will don Indian uniforms received mention on the All- Metro teams of the St. Louis area.

Lucas, a 6-1, 205-pound defensive end, was chosen for the first All- Metro East team. Goodman, a 5-8, 160-pound running back, was named all- conference and made the second All- Metro East team. LeFrancois, a 5-11, 190- pound center and linebacker was chosen for the all- district team and was voted to the All- Metro third team.

Both of the Alton players who plan to enroll at Southeast Missouri State are linemen. Redd, at 6-3 and 205 pounds, is a tight end. Naughton, 6-0 and 230 pounds is a defensive tackle.

The Arkansas recruit, Ogden, is a fullback. He is 5-10 and 180 pounds and made all- districtand all- state teams.

Pitchers Take Lumps

McLain Chased

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON Associated Press Sports Writer

The Baltimore Orioles and Oakland pitcher Denny McLain have a hitting problem. The problem is that the Orioles aren't hitting anybody nd everybody's hitting Denny.

The Orioles did manage six hits Friday night, which matched the total of their two previous games, but bowed to the Chicago White Sox and Wilbur Wood, 4-3.

The A's got McLain off the hook after the former superstar was rapped for four runs in the second inning by Boston, including home runs on Rick Miller and Tommy Harper, but lost 7-6 on Harper's second home run of the game in the 12th inning.

Elsewhere in the American League, Minnesota and Milwaukee battled 21 innings—one short of the longest night game in AL history—before play was suspended with a 3-3 tie to be resumed before today's regularly scheduled game, Texas downed Cleveland 3-1, the New York Yankees whipped California 6-3 and Detroit and Kansas City were rained out.

The White Sox jumped to a 40 lead against Mike Cuellar on a solo homer by Bill Melton— first of the season for the 1971 home run champ—a two-run blast by Dick Allen and Pat Kelly's run-scoring single.

The Orioles, held to two hits for seven innings, scored in the eighth on Andy Etchebarren's double and Bobby Grich's single and got two in the ninth on a walk, two singles and an error before reliever Steve Kealey retired Terry Crowley and Merv Rettenmund with two runners aboard.

Despite throwing more between assignments than at almost any time in his career, McLain was clobbered by Boston. He has surrendered 32 hits in 221-3 innings and has a 6.09 earned run average.

The A's tied the score with four runs in the fourth inning, three on Dave Duncan's homer and went ahead 6-5 in the seventh, only to have the Red Sox catch up in theninth on Ben Ogilvie's pinch single.

Little did pinch hitter Tommy Reynolds of the Brewers know when he stroked a two-run game-tying single in the seventh inning that he would start a long night's journey into day.

Neither team could manage another run before curfew rang after the 21st inning.

The longest night game in major league history went 24 innings in 1968 with Houston beating the New York Mets 1-0.

Ted Ford homered and three Texas pitchers combined for a seven-hitter as the Rangers dropped Cleveland out of first place in the AL East.

Ron Blomberg drove in the go-ahead run with a sixth-inning grounder after Roy White reached third on a walk, stolen base and wild pitch as the Yankees beat California. Blomberg then homered in the eighth.

"We want Willie! We want Willie! We want Willie" the fans chanted. And out of the New York Mets' dugout came—John Milner.

Willie Mays was making his debut Friday night in a New York uniform. But No. 24 never got the chance to show his stuff against his former team, the San Francisco Giants, much to the dismay of the 44,271 fans who jammed Shea Stadium hoping to get a glimpse of their newest hero.

It would have been perfect for baseball's top right-handed home run hitter to step up to the plate and crash his 647th over the wall.

The only problem, though, was that when a pinch-hitter was needed, a right-handed pitcher was on the mound for the Giants.

And so, with one one in the eighth inning, the Mets trailing 1-0 and the fans hollering for Willie, Mets' Manager Yogi Berra stayed with the percentages and sent up Milner, a rookie and, more important, a southpaw swinger.

"Boooooo!" the fans responded.

But the jeers turned to cheers as Milner worked Steve Stone for a walk and later came home with the tying run on Ken Boswell's double that knocked out the San Francisco starter.

The cheers continued in the ninth as the Mets loaded the bases with one out against reliver Jerry Johnson and Jerry Grote singled up the middle to give the Mets a 2-1 victory.

In Friday night's other National League games, Los Angeles defeated Philadelphia 6-1, San Diego beat Montreal 5-3, Pittsburgh topped Houston 4-2, the Chicago Cubs blanked Atlanta 2-0 and Cincinnati edged St. Louis 5-4.

"I felt sorry for the kid," Mays said of Milner, who had to face the wrath of the crowd. "But it didn't seem to bother him. And Yogi probably did the best thing by letting the kid bat."

Unbeaten Don Sutton finally gave up a run—he'd gone 31 scoreless innings—but couldn't have cared less.

"As long as we had five more than they did, I wasn't worried about that run," said the Dodger ace, who chalked up his fifth victory with a four-hitter against the Phillies.

Frank Robinson gave him all the backing he needed with a three-run homer in the fifth inning and Bill Russell added a solo shot.

"These young kids keep pulling together like this," Manager Don Zimmer said of his Padres, "and we might shake up the West Division a bit."

San Diego has done some shaking already by winning six of eight games. "These kids are all hitting. Nate Colbert and Leron Lee are leading it but Enzo Hernandez, Dave Campbell, Derrel Thomas—everybody's getting wood on the ball."

Lee did it against the Expos with a three-run homer. Campbell and John Jeter also delivered runs with singles. Mike Jorgensen cracked a two-run homer for Montreal.

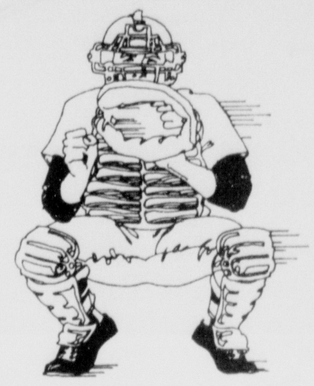
Milt May's tie-breaking single triggered a two-run Pittsburgh rally in the ninth that beat Houston.

The defeat was Houston's fourth in five games.

Bill Hands handled the Braves with ease, firing a fivehitter while his Cubs teammates jumped on Atlanta starter Ron Reed for a run in the second on Rick Monday's double and Jose Cardenal's single and another in the third on Randy Hundley's single and Glenn Beckert's double.

Joe Morgan cracked a tworun homer to power the Reds over St. Louis as Ross Grimsley, making his first start since being recalled from the minors, became only the second Cincinnati starter to pick up a victory.

Baseball Tips



5—Catching

(Fifth of 10 Parts.)

As catcher you are the defensive captain. You alone have all the playing field in front of you, putting you in a postion to call the shots.

Work out your signal for the pick-off play with each of the infielders. Don't make the signals complicated. Some examples: 1. Bare hand on knee means pick-off at first base. 2. Picking up dirt means pick-off play at second. 3. Glove hand to knee, pick-off at third base.

Also, you should have a return sign from the infielder so you're sure he knows. Otherwise you're likely to throw away the ball.

If no man is on base, the catcher should always get down the line to back up first base on a ball hit to the infield. He should run to a spot where he thinks the ball would go if overthrown.

Keep the signals to your pitcher simple. Agree before the game on signals to use.

When the pitcher is set to throw, get in crouched position on the balls of your feet. Hold the glove where you expect the ball to come.

SPRING MEANS only one thing to a dedicated angler. It's time to again match wits with the wily bass that lurk among the stumps in his favorite fishing hole.

EACH YEAR more and more young people are boating. This trio pauses for a soft drink before heading out in their outboard -powered runabout for an afternoon of fun and sun.

THE REV. AND MRS. R. W. CARROW, Morley, took advantage of this week's good weather to go fishing and were rewarded with 20 pounds of catfish and 11 pounds of bass. The Missouri Conservation Commission reported Friday in its weekly fishing report that fishing conditions have improved across the state and that catfish were the best catches in most Bootheel waters.

Individual honors in the competition over the prr 70 Grandview Municipal course went to Stan Logan of Southwest, who posted a 70 and 72 for 142.

Bob Markovicz of Central and Randy Miller of Northeast tied for second with 144. Tied for fourth, each with 146, were Joey Kremer of Southwest, Bill Daniels of Northeast and Rodney Shell of Southeast.

The tennis and track championships started Friday and were scheduled to be concluded today. Rain hampered both events.

Northwest opened defense of its crown in tennis with 18 points. Northeast was right behind with 13. Then came Missouri Rolla with five, Southeast three, Southwest and Central one each and Lincoln none.

Six Northwest players were in action in the six flights today.

Ken Ault of Southwest Missouri won Friday's only track final, taking the 3,000-meter steeplechase in nine minutes, 22.1 seconds. It was the first time the MIAA has included this event in its track championships. The triple jump and discus were postponed until today.

Indiana Pacers Rookie Scores 30, Grabs 20

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — After the second game of the American Basketball Association championship playoffs, New York Coach Lou Carnesecca said Indiana's muscular 6-foot-8 235-pound rookie George McGinnis looked like a heavyweight contender.

Carnesecca amended his evaluation following the third game Friday night.

"Now, you can say he's the champion," said the diminutive Nets' coach, who barely would reach McGinnis' elbow.

Carnesecca made his reevaluation after the burly McGinnis had wrecked the Nets, scoring 30 points and grabbing a game-high 20 rebounds as the Pacers posted a 114-108 victory and took a 2-1 lead in the best-of-seven series.

"McGinnis was the key," continued Carnesecca. "We just couldn't stop him, especially in the third period."

The former Indiana University star, who dropped out of school after his sophomore season, scored nine points in the first five minutes of the third quarter, when Indiana took a lead it never relinquished.

McGinnis, whose pro career high is 35 points, said his performance against the Nets "was more sweeter than the other game, because it came in the playoffs."

Rick Barry, the leading scorer in the playoffs, led the Nets with 44 points, 24 in the first half. He now has a total of 107 in the three games.

But Barry and John Roche had their problems at the foul line, helping cause the Nets' defeat. Barry, the league's leading free throw leader during the regular season, hit only eight of 13 attempts and Roche, the rookie from South Carolina, was a woeful one-of-seven.

"When did you ever see Rick miss five or Roche go one-forseven?" moaned Carnesecca.

Roche was particularly upset with himself.

"I never missed six shots in any game during college or with the Nets this season," he said, "It was frustrating and embarrassing."

The Nets will get a chance to square the series Monday night in the fourth game at the Nassau Coliseum.

Growth, Better Management Urged In Catfish Farming

WASHINGTON (AP) — Catfish farming is not likely to replace cattle ranching as an income earner, but economists think there is room for growth and much better management in the finny business.

An Agriculture Department survey of catfish processing plants in the South, where most of the pond-raised creatures are produced, shows one of the biggest problems to be a yearround supply.

The report, published by the Economic Research Service, is based on studies of 16 catfish processing plants in 1970. Only three years earlier, the ERS said, no wcatfish plants existed in the South.

Catfish farming has developed mostly in the past 10 years and in 1970 produced a harvest of more than 34 million pounds, double from the year before, according to the report.

Processing, however, is still in the throes of development. The 1970 study showed plants could process triple the volume of fish they were able to obtain and also were plagued by an erratic supply during the year.

Much of the catfish farm output is sold on a live basis to stock fishing ponds, to local consumers and as sporting catches to fishermen who pay fees to wet a line in a wellcrowded pool.

The 16 plants surveyed bought 6.4 million pounds of catfish in 1970, the report said. Farmers were paid an average of 35 cents per pound. The fish, after they were dressed, produced about 3.7 million pounds for wholesale at an average of 86 cents per pound.

Retail prices for fresh and frozen catfish ranged from an average of 93 cents per pound in December to a high of $1.02 in June, the report said.

Most of the fish produced are channel catfish, a type particularly suited for production, harvest and the consumer market, the ERS said. The fish reach eating size in about 18 months.

Studies show the catfish to be one of the best converters of feed into meat. On the average, officials say, two pounds of feed will produce one pound of catfish, putting them far ahead of cattle and other livestock.

Expect Demand For Soybean Oil To Grow

WASHINGTON (AP) — A trade team says demand for U.S. soybean oil is likely to grow during the next five to ten years in a number of countries throughout Latin America and the Mediterranean.

The team, sponsored by the Agriculture Department and the National Soybean Processors Association, recently returned from visiting a dozen countries in the two areas.

"A soybean crushing plant is now under construction in Greece, and each of the other Mediterranean countries visited except Morrocco expressed a desire for additional crushing facilities," the Agriculture Department reported Wednesday.

"Peru is currently importing U.S. soybeans, and the ominican Republic, Jamaica, Haiti and Panama are actively developing plans for soybean processing," the department said.

Corn Crop Brings Record $6.9 Billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says the 1971 corn crop was worth a record $6.9 billion to farmers, including government price support payments, despite sharply reduced market prices during the season.

Of the record 5.5 billion bushels harvested, according to an Economic Research Service report, farmers sold about 3.1 billion for a season average price of $1.08 per bushel for nearly $3.35 billion.

About 2.4 billion bushels of the 1971 crop was kept by producers for their own feeding operations and for seed, the report said.

When government price support payments were included, the average value of 1971 corn was $1.24 per bushel.

New Pandas Opposite 'As Night And Day'

WASHINGTON (AP) — If opposites attract one another Ling-Ling and Hsing-Hsing should get along famously when they finally meet.

"They're as different as night and day," says Larry Collins, zoologist who cares for the two gift pandas from China. "She's an extrovert and he's an introvert."

Ling-Ling, the female, likes to charge her keepers whenever they enter her cage at National Zoo, Collins said. HsingHsing, the male, just retreats quietly into a corner.

"He's kinda shy while she's the rough-and-ready type," he said.

Thousands of persons have trekked through the panda house since the rare animals arrived almost a month ago from Peking.

Recycling of Wastes Avoids Air Pollution

An increasing trend in the Missouri Bootheel to adopt laws prohibiting open burning of trash is causing area residents to seek other alternatives for disposing debris.

The federal government is applying more pressure on local governments to provide landfill trash disposal facilities.

With this in mind, many are seeking ways to recycle yard and garden wastes for use as mulch or a soil conditioner. Some are turning to shredder-grinders, or shredder-baggers which can reduce the volume of debris.

Instead of placing 10 or 12 bags of leaves for the trashmen to haul away, the shredders can chew up leaves, small limbs and even bottles, cans and small rocks, reducing the residue that must be hauled away.

As the increase in the use of the shredder-grinder continues, there is a heightened interest in the use of shredded materials turned out by these machines for recycling into the soil as compost.

All plant material, living or dead, succulent or woody, will decay in time. The composter speeds up decay in the compost pile by taking out twigs, sticks and non-green debris, then layering up the remainder in such a way that it decays rapidly.

Glass clippings, leaves, discarded plants from the flower beds and vegetable garden -- even the vegetable waste from the kitchen -- all go into the compost pile. If any diseased or insect infested plants are composted, the pile should be hot. The heat helps break down the material to its natural state.

The best form for composting varies with climate. In an arid climate or where the soil is sandy and fast draining, a compost pit is suitable. Above-ground compost piles process faster and are easier to handle. Minimum dimensions are four feet deep. Layers should be uniform and the pile should be slightly cupped at the top to catch moisture. The pile may be free-standing -- experts use this method -- or an area can be composed with removable wood sides, screen panels or stacked building blocks.

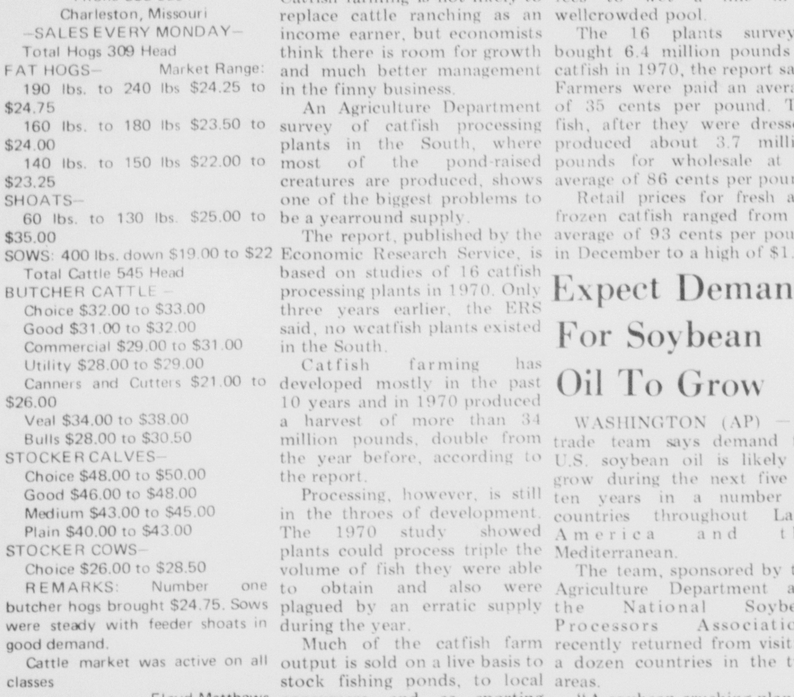
Most leafy materials go to the pile as is. If they are coarse, chop them up with a heavy knife. Corn stalks, dahlia stalks and other harsh materials should be shredded or chopped. Fine grass clippings should be mixed with coarser debris -- dried plant tops, weeds, etc. -- or they may make a soggy mass and putrefy instead of undergoing healthy decay.

Many organic gardeners manipulate their piles of garden debris and come up with more or less finished compost in two weeks or so. The average gardener makes compost one year to be used the next. It pays to have at least three piles going; old, earthy compost is ideal for potting soil mixtures, for digging into poor soil and to use when planting; compost at the cornflake stage makes fine mulch, can be spaded deep into subsoil to loosen it and is a suitable substitute for leaf mold.

A 10-bushel lot of garden debris will decay down to three bushels of cornflake textured compost, and ultimately, will be refined to between one and two bushels of fine, black humus.

Compost should be screened or shredded prior to use unless it has digested down to fine black humus. It can be spread with a scoop shovel. Spread it on the beds and spade it in. Double dig, and fork large amounts of coarse compost into the lower layer to improve drainage and begin the conversion of subsoil to loam. Compost used as a summer mulch on a crop can be spaded in after frost in the fall.

Compost is not primarily a fertilizer. It is a soil conditioner. It increases the humus content of the soil, converting clay to workable loam, and giving sandy or silty soil sufficient body to hold moisture and support a sturdy crop. It may have considerable nutritive value, particularly if the pile was layered up with barnyard manure or with bagged, dehydrated manure with or without the addition of a high nitrogen fertilizer (3:1:1) ratio) to speed up bacterial action.



BEFORE YOU CAN EVEN SAY "HELP" BILL LOWE IS THERE.

And you would have met him last April 10, if you'd been living at 80 St. Mark's Place on New York's Staten Island.

That night over 100 families were forced out of their apartments by a five-alarm blaze. And Bill was on the scene.

Not as a fireman, or a policeman, or even a fire buff. But as a Red Cross Volunteer. Rushing to find some beds for people in a nearby church. Rounding up sweaters and pants and shoes for people who'd lost just about everything. And passing around sandwiches and coffee to weary firemen and reporters.

That fire – and Bill's 7 hours on the scene – didn't make very big headlines in your morning paper. It wasn't that kind of "major disaster." But because there was a need for such assistance, the Red Cross was there to help. With volunteers like Bill.

Red Cross Volunteers – America's best neighbors – are the backbone of services like these, all across the country. People who give their time. And themselves.

Maybe you don't have a whole lot of hours to give to the Red Cross every month.

But think a little. Where do you fit in?

Superior Shirt Being Developed

ATLANTA - For Father's Day next year, Dad will be able to put on a durable press shirt far superior to any available on the market today.

The prediction was made Thursday by S. Frank Moore, director of the Cotton Incorporated Research and Technical Services Center at Raleigh, N.C.

The shirt will be made of 60 per cent cotton and will be treated with a vapor phase finish developed by Cotton Incorporated, the research, sales and marketing company sponsored by America's cotton growers through their dollar-per-bale programs.

Moore told an audience of the American Cotton Shippers' Association that the vapor phase treatment is working well on garments with at least 60 per cent cotton. He said fabrics are being made already.

He also said that, for the first time in five years, on-farm and off-farm agricultrual research is being funded at higher levels than product research.

Cotton Incorporated will spend over $1 million more on agricultural research during fiscal 1973 than on product research. Yet product research is also being accelerated.

The trick, Moore said, lies in the Cotton Incorporated Research Center, now under construction in Raleigh and scheduled for occupancy in the early summer.

The new facility will enable Cotton Incorporated to conduct expanded research programs in its own laboratories -- at considerable savings of producer dollars.

The new research center will house an enlarged research and fabric evaluation laboratory and new biochemistry and product development laboratories.

The product development lab will contain some $400,000 worth of knitting machines.

"We are moving cotton into double knits," Moore promised the shippers. "No more 'hot' in the summer, 'cold' in the winter, plus snagging problems."

He said the technical services department is now in full swing and is receiving daily calls from the textile industry. Cotton Incorporated's technical service experts have visted plants of all the top 50 textile mills in its programs to service what it sells -- cotton.

Moore also discussed Cotton Incorporated's participation in the boll weevil eradication experiment and the company's research on short-season cotton and byssinosis.

Future Of Valley To Be Talked

MEMPHIS — Development of water and related land resources in the Lower Mississippi Valley, including the St. Francis River and tributaries, for the next 50 years will be discussed at a meeting in Memphis Tuesday.

The session will be held in the Passport Restaurant Meeting Room, Memphis International Airport, beginning at 10 a.m., and it will be open to the general public.

Presiding over the meeting will be Major Gen. Charles C. Noble, who is president of the Mississippi River Commission, U.S. Army Corps of Engineers in Vicksburg, Miss.

The meeting is part of a study to provide a broad guide for the best use of water and land to satisfy human needs for the next half century. The study includes the economic development and growth of both the Lower Mississippi Valley and the entire nation, preservation, enhancement, and rehabilitation of the environment, and -- as the main consideration -- the well- being of all the people. Among items being studied are water quality and supply, fish and wildlife, recreation, natural environment, soil and water conservation, flood control, navigation, bank stabilization, mineral resources, hydropower, and coastal and estuarine areas.

William A. Lee, chief engineer, Missouri Water Resources Board, who will represent Missouri at the conference, says seven States and 10 federal agencies are involved in the study. Worms In Grain And Fields

BLOOMFIELD — Armyworms are present in many small grain and pasture fields in Stoddard County, and heavy worm populations are being found in some fields according to Tom Brown, Area Agronomy Specialist.

Farmers are urged to keep a close watch on these crops, and spray when it becomes necessary.

Spray applications are recommended when an average of four or more non-parasitized, half- grown or larger worms per square foot are found. In order to find the worms, shake the plants vigorously and look carefully in the trash at the base of the plants. Worms are being found in all sizes; however significant numbers of worms large enough to do damage are being found in several fields. Considerable evidence of foliage feeding is being found in some fields.

Should spraying become necessary, toxaphene and trichlorfon (Dylox) are recommended for use in small grain fields. For control in pastures, carbaryl (Sevin), ethyl parathion, malathion, and toxaphene are recommended; however toxaphene should not be used on pastures to be grazed by dairy cattle. Cattle should be removed from pasture during the application of these insecticides.

Information pertaining to armyworm control may be obtained upon request from your County University Extension Center.

Fertilizer Vital For Bean Yields

The possibility of increasing soybean yields with fertilizers is a common topic among farmers these days. The importance of proper soil fertility has taken on added signficance the past two or three years. In general, soybeans have been mistreated when it comes to plant food, according to John Garrett, Area Agronomy Specialist.

Why are farmers becoming more conscious of the importance of this crop? I believe three of the biggest reasons are: (1) Acreage (2) Consistent Low Yields, and (3) Economic Importance.

Soybeans are grown on approximately one-half of the cultivated acres in Southeast Missouri. This means more soybeans are grown than all other crops combined. Missouri produces three million plus acres of soybeans each year. About 35 percent of these are grown in Southeast Missouri.

The increase in economic importance is a big factor in motivating farmers to do a better job of production. In general, soybeans have been planted, cultivated a couple of times and forgotten until harvest. The manager who does his best in production will stay on top. He should pay special attention to soil preparation, variety, date of planting, weed control, insect control, irrigation, harvesting and fertilizers.

The average yield for the past several years has been 22 bushels per acre. Many farmers are above this ,,,,but many harvest less. The question is often asked, "Will fertilizer increase soybean yields?" The answer is yes on medium to very low testing soils in phosphorus and potassium.

Before a farmer considers the possibility of applying fertilizers, he should have the soil tested. A good soil test is the first step in increasing yields. A soil test will give you a quick inventory of the plant food status of your soil, Garrett states. Your soil may not need fertilizer at all. A soil test will tell.

In general, the number one thing limiting soybean yields in SEMO is acid soils. Soybeans are a legume plant and require a pH of 6.0 to 6.5 for tip production. The average pH of Southeast Missouri soils in 5.1 ---- very strongly acid and far below the optimum pH level. Limestone is needed to correct acidity and supply calcium and/or magnesium.

The application of nitrogen for soybeans is not generally recommended because they have the ability to trap enough nitrogen from the air to supply most of their needs. In order for the soybeans to do this job. a favorable pH of 6.0 to 6.5 is needed, this will help increase the population of bacteria to fix nitrogen from the air.

A 40 bushel per acre soybean crop will contain approximately 150 pounds of nitrogen in the grain. Ten to twelve pounds of nitrogen, where recommended, applied in a complete fertilizer will often increase yields on low fertility, low organic matter soils of high pH. A small application of nitrogen will often increase yields on beans following wheat. More research is needed on the use of nitrogen on soybeans.

Phosphorus is necessary for good soybean production. Soybeans have a high phosphorus requirement. A 40 bushel per acre crop contains 35 pounds of P2O5 in the grain. Soils that test medium or lower in phosphorus should have 30 to 60 pounds of phosphate applied annually to prevent phosphorus deficiency.

Most of the soils in Southease Missouri are high in phosphorus, and additional phosphate is not needed for top yields. At least 30 percent of the soils are low to very low in phosphorus and need phosphate. The only way to tell if your soil needs phosphate is by soil testing.

Potash is required in large amounts by soybeans and all soils that test medium or lower should be fertilized with 30 to 120 pounds or potash per acre. When soils are limed, increased amounts of potash are used because bigger and better crops are grown after the soil is limed. A 40 bushel per acre crop of soybeans will contain about 55 lbs. of potash in the grain.

Next to lime, potassium is the most deficient plant food in Southeast Missouri soils. Many experiments have been conducted on different soil types.

In tests on soils testing 150 pounds of potassium per acre or less, 60 pounds of potash have increased yields an average of 7 bushels per acre. With potash selling at about five cents per pound, it would cost $3.00 an acre to apply 60 lbs. At $3.00 per bushel, the extra 7 bushels would return $21.00 an acre, for a net profit of $18.00 per acre.

Phosphate and potash can be applied about any time of the year. Four recommended methods are: (1) band 5 to 6 inches beside and below the seed, at or prior to planting: (2)broadcast and plow down or disk in: (3) band beside row shortly after emergence, and (4) fertilize previous crop, such as wheat or corn, heavy so soybeans can use the leftover fertilizer.

AS already mentioned, don't guess about soybean fertilization. Test your soil and find out the exact nutrient status. If your soil is acid, lime should be applied. If it is medium or lower in phosphours and or potassium, one or both of these nutrients should be applied.

Soil Meeting Plans To Be Made

BENTON — Scott County Soil and Water Conservation District directors will meet June 12 to discuss plans for the annual meeting.

Cotton Value Climbs Near $1.44 Billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sharply higher market prices helped boost the value of the 1971 cotton crop to nearly $1.44 billion, not counting government payments, the Agriculture Department announced Mond ay.

The season average price for all cotton produced last year was 28.62 cents per pound, compared with 21.98 for the 1970 crop. Total market value of 1970 production, not counting payments, was $1.12 billion.

Including government payments, 1971 cotton was worth $2.26 billion, compared with $2.01 billion for 1970 production, officials said.

Those figures did not include the value of cotton seed, put at $241.1 million for 1971, compared with $229.6 million for 1970.

State Looks For Rising Exports

JEFFERSON CITY — Gov. Warren E. Hearnes has proclaimed May 22-27 as World Trade Week in Missouri in keeping with a national observance to call attention to the economic and social importance of world trade.

Commissioner of Agriculture Dexter Davis, president of Mid-America International Agri-Trade Council -- composed of 12 Midwest states that includes Missouri -- reports, "I'm vitally concerned tha Missourians recognize the impact that world trade has on their every day lives, their income and standard of living, and that there exists a continuing need for expansion of Missouri exports, especially of agricultural products."

According to the commissioner, Missouri exports of agri-products makes up about 15 per cent of the total state agricultural income.

Dear Charley.

I have finally figured out a way to end the war. Take the rocks the government traded a 9 million dollar cart to the moon for, and draft a few Mountain Boys to throw them and I think we can win it easy.

Isn't it wonderful what you can dream up after a few cold cans of Budweiser Beer?

Leming Hall Walk Offered at Cape

CAPE GIRARDEAU — A sentimental journey through Leming Hall, a 1905 dormitory soon to be razed to make way for a new student union building at Southeast Missouri State College, has been added to the list of commencement day activities at the college.

An open house will be held from 1:30 p.m. - 4 p.m. Sunday at the dormitory, which holds many memories for thousands of Southeast Missouri State alumni.

The college's Board of Regents decided at its last meeting to locate the new union there following a recommendation of a site selection committee consisting of students, faculty members, and administrators.

It was pointed out at that time that Leming Hall is in a poor state of repair, and experts have estimated it would cost at least $350,000 to repair it.

No time has been set for demolition of the structure to begin, but in all probability the women living there now will be the last to do so.

Leming, which fronts on Normal St. just west of Kent Library, was originally built as a private endeavor primarily through the efforts of three men, Leon J. Albert, M. E. Leming, and Louis Houck. It was purchased by the college in 1912 for about $85,000. The hall has a capacity of 120 women.

For many years Leming and Albert Hall, which was east of Kent Library, were the only residence halls on the Southeast Missouri State campus. Albert Hall went by the wayside a number of years ago to make way for a much larger dormitory complex, Dearmont Quadrangle.

The idea for the open house at Leming Hall was suggested by Miss Hattie L. Eicholtz, director of alumni affairs at the college. She lived there as a child with her mother who was the head resident at that time, and sister.

President Mark F. Scully immediately accepted the proposal and appointed a committee headed by Mrs. Lyman Evans, associate professor of art at the college, to develop the plans. Details are being worked out this week.

Thieves Strike At Two Farms

NEW MADRID — Two men are in custody for investigation by the New Madrid county sheriff's department in connection with a farm theft Tuesday night.

Grady Truelove reported a tractor cylinder, water pump and hand tools stolen from his farm northwest of Lilbourn. W. A. Merrick of the same area reported loss of a gas water pump.

Nina Pallandt To Make Film

NEW YORK (AP) — Nina Van Pallandt, the Danish singer who testified in the Clifford Irving-Howard Hughes affair, has been signed to costar in a film with Elliott Gould, it was announced Monday.

Interchange On I-57 To Be Replaced

JEFFERSON CITY — Construction of a new Interstate 57 interchange at Highway 62 east of Charleston is planned to eliminate a dangerous interchange, Robert N. Hunter, chief engineer of the Missouri Highway Department, said Thursday.

The triangular- shaped interchange, complicated by the intersection of old Route UU, has been the scene of several accidents in the past year, including two fatalities.

The new diamond- type interchange planned would be similar to the South Main overpass at I-57 in Charleston, Hunter said.

The new interchange had been scheduled for construction with the nine-mile section of I-57 from Charleston to the proposed bridge that would take the interstate across the Mississippi River.

Lt. Col. Alfred G. Crow, state aviation officer for the Missouri National Guard, left, pins the major rank insignia on Doyle L. Murphy during a promotion ceremony in Jefferson City.

Doyle L. Murphy Promoted To Major

Major Murphy, commanding officer of the 70th public information detachment, began his military career in the guard in April of 1950. After completing officer training he attended the infantry officer basic course at Fort Benning, Ga., in 1954. In 1957 Major Murphy returned to Fort Benning where he completed the infantry officers advanced course.

During 1958 he attended the army fixed wing flight school at Fort Rucker, Ala., followed by attendance at the army rotary wing (helicopter) school in 1960.

Certified as both an airplane and helicopter pilot Major Murphy spent 12 years in flying assignments, most of which was spent with the 635th aviation company, Warrensburg.

In March of this year Major Murphy was appointed as Commanding Officer of the newly created 70th public information detachment. Major Murphy has 22 years continuous service in the guard.

Major Murphy is self employed as a farmer. He lives at 208 Kramer Drive, Sikeston, with his wife, Betty Carol, and their two sons, Mark, 16, and Robert 5.

May 8, 1972

Dear Editor:

As of January 1, 1972, eighty- eight (88) members of the United Nations were in arrears on their dues payments in the total amount of $186,867,884., according to The Congressional Record. However, forty- five (45) of these nations in arrears voted against the U. S. on the Red China- Taiwan issue!

Article 19 of the United Nations Charter denies a country in serious arrears its vote in the General Assembly. Thus all nations in arrears had no legal right to vote on the Red China- Taiwan issue, and if they did so, their votes were illegal.

Why didn't the United Nations deny them the right to vote? Perhaps Red China has no legal right to be seated. Why hasn't this been questioned by the Administration and Congress?

More Hanky- Panky!!

Sincerely,
C. C. Moseley,

DOWNTOWN SIKESTON

MY MOTHER, THE QUEEN

Cut on dotted line and put over head

Mother

It may just be the sweetest word in the language.
It mayjust have more meanings , too.
Like love and tenderness and caring
...to name a few.

And, sometimes a lot of years have to go by to really know how much one little word can mean.

Sikeston merchants have put a lot of thought into selecting the perfect things to give. You'll find little luxuries and practical gifts.
The way each one says 'Thank you' on this day may vary, but some things just never do change at all ... LIKE MOTHERS!
